BIG CAMPAIGN IS LAUNCHED

Fort Wayne Knights of Columbus Will Help Raise $1,000,000.

HAS ENDORSEMENT OF DIGNITARIES

Social and Moral Protection of Soldiers Is Object of Movement.

Bearing the endorsement and blessing of James Cardinal Gibbons, venerable primate of America, Rt. Rev. H. J. Alerding, bishop of the Fort Wayne diocese, and Rt. Rev. Joseph Chatriand, coadjutor bishop of Indianapolis, a big campaign to assist in raising $1,000,000 was launched in Allen county Sunday under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

The one million dollars which is to be raised in this campaign throughout the country will be expended to provide social and moral protection for the American soldiers regardless of creed.

It is the plan to establish Catholic recreation centers and to provide more Catholic chaplains for the army and navy. This will give the Catholic soldier boys an opportunity to hear mass and receive the sacraments and other consolations of the Catholic faith.

Announcement of the campaign was made in all the Catholic churches Sunday and great impetus was given to the movement when the letters from the three dignitaries of the church were read in which all endorsed the campaign as a highly commendable one.

Headquarters have been established in the Knights of Columbus hall and reports will be taken there every day by the various teams. The office will be kept open night and day.

Organization has already been completed and is as follows:

CAN GET IN SAME COMPANY

Captain T. F. Ryan, U. S. A., Makes Inducing Offer to Young Men.

STEADY STREAM OF MEN IN THE OFFICE

Captain Harry Clark of Battery B to Arrive Monday Evening.

Young men in Fort Wayne are now being given one of the best opportunities ever offered for enlisting before the draft catches them. Capt. Thomas F. Ryan, U. S. A., states that groups of young men from two to 135 will be guaranteed to be kept in the same company if they enlist within the next few days.

This is the infantry branch of the service and in order to make the offer still more attractive Captain Ryan states that it is very probable that these men will be sent to Fort Benjamin Harrison.

A steady stream of men kept pouring into the regular army recruiting station all day Monday. The majority of this number came for the purpose of enlisting. Captain Ryan was of the opinion that by tonight he would have from forty to sixty men to send away to Fort Thomas, Ky. Eight men were sent away Sunday evening.

Captain Clark Coming. Lieut. H. C. Moriarty, of Battery B, received a telegram from Capt. Harry Clark, commanding officer of this company, that he would arrive in Fort Wayne Monday evening and that he intended to conduct an inspection of the company. This is regular drill night and it is obligatory that every member is present.

Dr. A. C. Arnett will be in Fort Wayne until 9 o'clock Monday evening and every recruit who has not yet undergone a physical examination must report before this time. It is understood that any recruit who does not make his appearance will be brought by a detachment or by the sheriff.

For Medical Corps. Edward H. Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Cook, 1019 West Wayne street, enlisted Saturday afternoon at the Fort Wayne recruiting station. He entered the medical branch of the service. He left Saturday night for Fort Thomas, Ky. "Ned," as he was familiarly called, was a graduate of the Fort Wayne high school and for the past three years was employed as a skilled mechanic by the Fort Wayne Overland company service department.

Somewhere in France. For several months relatives and friends of George Placien, who resided on West Jefferson street, did not hear a word from him. Saturday afternoon a friend received a card bearing his name and bearing the heading, "Somewhere in France."

No Furlough Granted. Kinney Blitz, who sails for France soon with the Williams college ambulance unit, was unable to secure a furlough and visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Blitz, as he had planned. His parents were to meet him at Pittsburgh.

Gets a Promotion. Word has been received that J. J. Bowers, son of the Williams college ambulance unit, has been promoted to corporal in the aviation corps at Fort Kelly, Texas. This young man enlisted last March and has showed such ability that he has been promoted and is in line for a sergeant's promotion. He is a native of St. Louis, Mo., and is a member of the United States aviation post at Rantoul, Ill.

Hammond Organizes Unit. Sergeant Welch, one of the five wires of Captain Ryan's staff, has sent word to his family stating that he has begun work of recruiting an entire company in Hammond with prospects that his plans will be realized. He already has seventy men for this new unit and has about 200 lined up.

Wagner, Tim. J. McGrath, Morris C. Elder and C. J. Stein.

St. Andrew's. J. Herman Bueter, captain; Edmund Lanterner, Joseph Schaffer, John Engle, Joseph Orth, Frank Cartaux, Cletus Meehan, Erwin Smith, Joseph Schoenke, William Smith, Frank Bode, Chas. Kintz, Joseph Soller, Benjamin Hoevel, Burt Bohay, David Light-hall, John Bird and Charles Huth.

Arcoles—(St. Patrick's.) Dennis F. Gorman, captain; Frank Corbett, Joseph P. Ryan, Frank Wesels, Joseph Wesels, William Stack, Albert O'Laughlin, Frank Corbett, Jr., Bernard Minnick, F. E. Gorman, W. C. Garman, and Edward Gase.

Monroeville—(St. Rose.) Dr. D. E. Kauffman, captain; Dr. C. L. Meyers, Harry McArdle, Michael O'Shaughnessy and Henry Minnick.

New Haven—(St. John's.) Thomas Dowling, captain; Conrad Mahoney, Herman Schmelzer, Edward Becker, Louis Vode, Richard Blackwell and Edward Schrader.

ANDERSON BEATING DRAFT. Anderson, Ind., July 23.—Sixty recruits have signed the master roll of Company M, Indiana national guard, and it is expected the necessary quota of 150 men will be secured within a few days. Because of many enlistments in the army and national guard since the war began only about one hundred young men will be drafted.

AT LAST THE SECRET OF HENRY FORD'S TRACTOR IS UNCOVERED THE GASOLINE ENGINE AGAINST THE SUBMARINE IS THE WAR ISSUE

Detroit Motor King's Jitney Horse Is Already at Work and Is Declared a Huge Success—Will Be Turned Out by Thousands in New Factory Built for That Purpose.

(By B. E. LING.)
Detroit, July 23.—Henry Ford against Krupp.
Detroit against Essen.
Tractor against submarine.
This is the new array of forces in the world war.

The submarine is the engine of starvation; the tractor is the engine of plenty. The submarine stands for destruction; the tractor for production. It is the submarine's mission to starve the allied world into submission to Germany; it is the tractor's purpose to nourish it for victory over kaiserism. Henry Ford has invented the tractor. He has perfected it. He is beginning to manufacture it in large quantities.

Ford's tractor will revolutionize farming. It will multiply the production of farms. It will double, triple, quadruple the yield of crops. It will stock the allied world's pantry.

"My tractor is a proved success," said Henry Ford today. "It will accomplish all I have sought for it to accomplish."

Ford, the patriot, is fighting eighteen hours a day in the fore line of the battle against autocracy. He believes victory rests with the alliance or nation that can feed its people longest. And Ford is fighting to produce the food.

This is Ford's conviction: If the allies fail to force a victory with land forces, sea navy and air navy, their last weapon is the tractor. A military tractor is an automobile of starvation. And the tractor will feed democracy while kaiserism starves from the starving.

The tractor is neither as romantic as the submarine nor as picturesque as the "tank."

It is only eight feet long and four feet high, weighs between an automobile and a traction engine. It can do any farm work a horse can do, and at least six times as much. One man and a tractor can accomplish as much as six men and six horses.

The yield of a farm depends on the labor expended on it. The tractor will labor twenty-four hours a day; seven days a week; 365 days a year. It will plow, harrow, plant, cultivate, reap, furnish power for farm machinery and haul crops to market.

Other tractors now on the market will do these things and do them well. Four thousand tractors were used in the spring planting in Kansas alone.

But Ford's new tractor is to the tractor world what Ford's auto is to the automobile world. The Ford tractor's characteristics are these:

It is cheap. It is easy to operate. It burns gasoline, kerosene or alcohol.

It is simple to construct. It can be built in vast quantities.

"Quantity production" is the key-note of Ford's plan for defeating the submarine with the tractor. The more tractors, the more food.

Ford has begun to build tractors for England at his experimental plant at Dearborn, a Detroit suburb. He is rushing enlargement of this plant to make certain delivery of 7,000 tractors to England by February—in time for next year's farming.

Ford tractor at work hauling gang plow to help beat U-boats.

England gets the first because Germany is trying to starve England first. Ford is building another tractor plant at Cork, Ireland. Tractors built in Ireland are sure to reach their destinations in the British Isles. And food raised in the British Isles is sure to reach the mouths of the British people.

A dozen Ford tractors already are tilling English soil. These the British government has heartily approved and thankfully accepted.

I found Ford in the rush of his labors. He has almost entirely forsaken his $100,000,000 auto plant and for six months has devoted himself day and night to his tractor. The completed machine is the product of years of thought, but it has been brought to perfection in these six months.

Now fifty of them are proving their worth on Ford's 4,000-acre farm at Dearborn.

Two months ago Ford told close friends:

"At last I have the tractor to a point where it can be produced and marketed successfully. It's a winner."

The "winner" is the evolution of fifty models that have been built and tried at Dearborn in the past two years—most of them during the last six months of intensive effort.

Ford thinks of his tractor not only as a weapon in war, but a blessing in peace.

"He foresees the day when the 50,000,000 farmers in the world will be equipped with tractors.

The price of each tractor, when materials reach a normal level, will be about $300.

The United States government is co-operating with Ford to obtain quantity production of the tractor as a farm necessity. The house of representatives, largely on recommendation of Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of Agriculture Houston, has appropriated $400,000 to make the River Rouge navigable. This is to provide water transportation to assist Ford in building the immense tractor plant and blast furnaces he plans.

The tractor plant and furnaces will eventually dim in magnitude the Ford auto plant, with its 37,000 employees. Detroit will defeat Essen. Ford will triumph over Krupp.

PLAN TO CONSERVE THE WOOL SUPPLY

Various Interests Meet in Chicago to Discuss Measures.

Chicago, July 23.—Plans to conserve the supply and stimulate the production of sheep and wool were discussed today at a joint meeting of the state council of national defense and packers, cloth and clothing manufacturers and other allied industries.

The meeting was called in answer to assertions that unless effort was made immediately to increase the output of wool, wool scarcity would ensue which would hamper seriously the government in supplying the army with uniforms and blankets.

Means of overcoming shortage and combatting big prices of cotton goods, hosiery and woolen materials, due to the war, also were before the semi-annual convention here of the United Mercantile Stores association. Eight hundred merchants, representing 1,500 central western stores, are expected to attend the sessions which are to last a week.

BLUFFTON ELEVATOR DESTROYED BY FIRE

Flames of Incendiary Origin Cause Estimated Loss of $2,800.

(Special to The Sentinel.)
Bluffton, Ind., July 23.—Fire of incendiary origin destroyed the old Davison elevator in this city early Sunday morning. The loss is estimated at $2,800. H. C. Arnold & Sons, who own the building, announce that they will rebuild at once.

The fire was discovered at 1:45 o'clock Sunday morning and was all blazes before help arrived. In addition to the building a half carload of salt, a carload of coke, one and a half cars of coal and a large amount of fuel tiles were destroyed by the fire.

Another attempt to destroy the building was made several weeks ago, but the attempt failed. Bluffton also has a history of incendiary origin. Authorities suspect the incendiary and it is likely that an arrest will be made within the next few days.

SPENDS SUNDAY HERE.

Emil Koenig, of Columbia avenue, a member of the hospital corps unit of the United States army and who is now on special detail as chief clerk at the officers' reserve corps training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, visited with his family here Sunday.

MUST RETURN THE LIST IMMEDIATELY

Country Conscription Names Disappear From Bulletin Board in Court House.

Disappearance of the county conscription list from the bulletin board in the corridor of the Allen county court house has caused some worry on the part of the county conscription board. The list disappeared some time between Friday night and Monday morning.

Sheriff George W. Gillie was notified of the disappearance and work of recovering the valuable list has begun. If the list is returned immediately the matter of the disappearance will be dropped, but should the list not make its appearance within a day it is likely that an arrest will follow.

It was stated Monday morning that this list can be regarded as United States property and any person who steals government property is usually severely dealt with.

WAR COMING TO AN END?

Supposedly Lost Brother of Miss Lena Buell Says He Has "Hunch."

HAD NOT HEARD FROM HIM FOR SIX MONTHS

Civilian Relief Committee of Red Cross Renders First Assistance.

"I have a hunch that the war will soon end."

These startling, acceptable and plausible words came to Fort Wayne directly from the western front of the great battlefields of Europe. And they passed the censor.

Words of this nature were contained in a letter received Saturday afternoon by Miss Lena Buell, 206 West Creighton avenue, from her supposedly lost brother who is fighting for the general cause with a Canadian regiment somewhere in France.

Miss Buell received a letter from her brother on February 1, 1917. Since that time she had not heard from him. The last letter received came across just before the submarine blockade was begun. Miss Buell became alarmed because she was not receiving any communications whatsoever from her brother. She received no response to her many letters.

Appeal was made to the Red Cross society of Fort Wayne and through the civilian relief committee, of which Charles R. Lane is chairman, Clayton C. Buell, Miss Buell's brother, was located. It was discovered that his number was 463,428 and that he had been transferred from one company to another. This is the first aid that this committee has rendered, but it stands ready to assist anyone who is in trouble of this nature.

Mr. Buell enlisted in a Canadian regiment a year ago last March in Vancouver. Miss Buell received letters from him regularly until last February, when the last one was received. She grew alarmed and entertained thoughts that some misfortune had befallen him.

The American lad states in his letter that he is feeling well and that there is no reason for her to worry.

WRITERS OF CHICAGO KEEP A GREWSOME DAY

Whitechapel Club Observes Anniversary of Collins Cremation.

Chicago, July 23.—Surviving members of the Whitechapel club assembled at midnight on the shore of Lake Michigan, near Millers, Ind., and remained until dawn for the purpose of commemorating the twenty-five years ago of Morris Allen Collins, poet and cowboy member of the club, who killed himself that day. The social ideas he favored might be remembered. The Whitechapel club, which was made up of journalists and artists and who were the cause of the club, who killed himself that day. The social ideas he favored might be remembered. The Whitechapel club, which was made up of journalists and artists and who were the cause of the club, who killed himself that day. The social ideas he favored might be remembered.

Collins, who committed suicide in 1892, came to Chicago from the west in the late '80s. Championing the cause of the poor and oppressed, he waged a campaign against possession of great wealth. His cause met with little encouragement and it was to bring it before the public that Collins killed himself, first requesting that his fellow members cremate his body that his sacrifice might be more effective. Today's ceremony was similar to that held twenty-five years ago.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarhal, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

ANTON LANG CALLED TO GERMAN COLORS

Man Who Played "Christus" to Oberammergau Shows Country's Stress.

New York, July 23.—When Germany called Anton Lang, famous Christus of the Oberammergau Passion play, to military service she inadvertently served the cat out of the bag regarding her military condition today.

That move, according to Gertrude Atherton, famous American author, proves Germany is on her last legs and is going to extremes to continue fighting.

Anton Lang is a consumptive and has not been expected to live long. On account of his fame and popularity as impersonator of Christ, and his commercial value to Germany, he would be perhaps last to be ordered out.

"The obvious deduction," says Miss Atherton, "is if Germany is ordering her consumptives out, she must be pretty hard up. For all we know she may have emptied her sanatoriums on to the battlefield."

Miss Atherton visited Oberammergau in 1908, and boarded in the Lang home.

"My husband is tubercular," Frau Lang told Miss Atherton. "He may be the Christus in 1910, but he never will live until 1920. What little he makes as a potter is due to the fact that he is the Christus, and tourists buy of him."

"Others in the village told me the same thing," says Miss Atherton, "that with Anton Lang it was only a question of a few years. I have seen a few men look more frail than he is not more fitted to serve in the trenches, or in warfare at all, than a delicate woman."

PERSHING ON THE FIRING LINE—HOW AMERICA'S FIGHTING FORCE IN FRANCE WILL BE ORGANIZED

(By A MILITARY EXPERT.)
(Copyright, 1917, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

The "Pershing Zone" will soon be a fact. A "little strip of the United States" is going to extend across France from the American base on the French coast to the front line American trenches.

After a detailed investigation of the system established by the British and French, General Pershing has decided to establish a complete, American-controlled line of communications.

The business of maintaining an army at the front is like running a small nation, continually subjected to a series of earthquakes, devastating fires, floods, famine, plague and sudden death. It is a carefully planned effort to meet the unexpected.

I will undertake to describe as clearly as possible in the limited space allowed to me the method of carrying on this great business.

Lines of Communication Are Divided Into Two Sections.
To administer and control the "supply, sanitary and telegraph service," the line of communications will be divided into two sections—a base section and an advance section—each with an assistant chief of staff in charge, competent to issue orders in the name of the commander. The advance section commander establishes his headquarters at the advance depot, on the rail head immediately behind the fighting troops. Here he has under him a staff representing the quartermaster, medical, engineer, ordnance and signal corps. To his depot are attached ammunition, supply, sanitary and engineer columns to connect with the corresponding divisional columns attached to the fighting troops.

The commander of the base section controls all that portion of the line of communications up to the depots, sanitary units and telegraph stations of the advance section. He will probably make his headquarters at the base on the coast where he has a staff similar to that of the advance section. These men are responsible to the commander of the line of communications (who in turn is responsible to the war department at home), that the reserve supplies on hand in his various depots shall be maintained between the maximum and minimum amounts fixed by General Pershing. For instance, a division (28,334 men) must have 4,700 tons of medical stores alone as its initial supply. For every million men on the front a thousand-ton refrigerating plant must be maintained.

Before a single one of Pershing's fighters landed in France, groups of staff corps men from every technical branch of the army went with Pershing ahead to make all arrangements for receiving, supplying and forwarding the troops. The result is the "Pershing Zone in France."

How does this zone work? The commander of the line of communications will organize it into three administrative units: (a) "supply, sanitary and telegraph service;" (b) "service of military railways;" (c) "service of military police."

No officer not attached to the military railways is allowed to give orders to subordinates of the "railways service," or to interfere in any way with the running of trains.

The work of reconstruction at the railroad is kept separate from operation of the line. This is the work for which nine new regiments of engineers have been raised.

The third branch of the work of the commander of the line of communications is organization of military police. These consist of troops assigned by the commanding general for the purpose. Within the "American Zone" they will protect the inhabitants, enforce order, keep all roads clear, arrest all soldiers and civilian army employees absent without proper authority, keep a list and description of all civilians with the army, take over all prisoners passed back from the front and conduct them to the places where they are ordered assembled, police all railroad stations, depots and buildings, protect telegraph and telephone lines and prevent spying.

This elaborate organization is designed to relieve the combatant field force as far as possible from every consideration except that of defeating the enemy. Without it, Pershing's men in the front line could not exist and fight for a single day.

The Cause of Constipation.
Constipation is usually due to a lack of water in the excrement. To effect a cure you must take more water in the system. It may be months, however, before this has any appreciable effect on the bowels, but when persisted in and fruit and vegetables containing water are eaten freely, the condition may be overcome. In the meantime use the mildest laxatives obtainable and take only enough to produce the desired effect. Chamberlain's Tablets are one of the best. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect.—Advertisement.

REPUBLICAN HOLDS THAT STATE OIL JOB

Marion Circuit Court in Ruling Enjoins Democratic Pretender.

Indianapolis, July 23.—Marion Caldwell, a republican, was adjudged to be the legal oil inspector of the state, in a decision made public today by Judge Louis Ewhank, of the Marion circuit court. An injunction to prevent Adam H. Felker, a democrat, and men he had appointed as deputies from acting as oil inspectors was granted. An appeal to the Indiana supreme court will be taken, it is said. Caldwell was appointed by Governor Goodrich and Felker was named by State Geologist Barrett. There has been a dispute as to who should name the oil inspector since the United States district court some time ago gave the oil companies an injunction against the oil inspection department as it had been operated in the last few years, preventing collection of fees for the work.

SHIPPING BOARD MEMBER RESIGNS

White Quits and Then Is of Mind to Stay to Aid
Friend Denman.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—John D. White, of Kansas City, has resigned as a member of the shipping board and President Wilson was said today to have accepted the resignation. Officials at the white house declared Mr. White's resignation was not connected with the difficulties that have developed between Chairman Denman, of the board, and Major General Goethals, of the emergency fleet corporation, over the government's ship building program.

Mr. White was said to have found the work exceedingly heavy and was anxious to get out on this account. He was one of Mr. Denman's supporters on the board.

Report that John A. Donald, of New York, another member of the board, has resigned, was denied at the white house. Officials in close touch with the Denman-Goethals controversy said today it was not probably that President Wilson would summon either man to the white house to discuss the questions involved.

The president has all available information before him. He knows the two men thoroughly and is expected to settle the matter as quickly as possible on the information he already has.

Captain White, it turns out, offered his resignation to the president one week ago on the ground of ill-health and went on a vacation. When he returned the row between Chairman Denman and General Goethals had become acute and now, it is understood, he would like to remain until the situation clears. Captain White has supported Mr. Denman and Vice Chairman Brent in their opposition to General Goethals. John A. Donald and R. B. Stevens, the other two members of the board, are said to have taken sides with the general. President Wilson probably will take a hand in the controversy within a few days and supplement his order dividing authority conferred on him by issuing instructions putting either Denman or General Goethals in supreme charge of shipbuilding. As it is each claims he is responsible. Mr. Donald denied emphatically today reports that he would resign.

The Mighty "KNUCKLE" Ball and its effective elusiveness described by Eddie Cicotte

BY J. B. SHERIDAN.

IT HAS been said that there are more methods of poisoning a dog than by filling his stomach with melted butter. So, too, there are more ways of keeping batters from batting in a baseball game than by throwing the ball past or through their bats. The "knuckle ball" is one of these ways.

When Eddie Cicotte—now don't say "Si-cot" nor yet "Si-cottay," but "See-kote"—pitched Chicago against St. Louis on April 14, 1917, his name was flashed all over the United States, Canada, Alaska and the island possessions of the United States. Everywhere an American lives, in the trenches of Flanders, Africa, etc., it is known now that Cicotte pitched a no-hit game.

Great is the fame that follows the pitching of a no-hit game. Few pitchers have done it—as many as one each year, perhaps. Joseph McElroy Mann, a student at Princeton College, was the first man to pitch a no-hit game. That was against Yale, May 29, 1875. In 1876 George Washington Bradley pitched a no-hit game for St. Louis against Hartford. On July 12 the first perfect no-hit, no-man-to-first game was pitched by J. Lee Richmond, a left-hander, for Worcester, Mass., against Cleveland. This Richmond must have been some ballplayer. Batted in second place and had six assists the day he made his famous record.

Lots of them have pitched no-hit games since that time. Larry Corcoran, the famous White Stocking, pitched three no-hit games between 1880 and 1884. Jim Galvin pitched two between 1880 and 1884. The famous Cy Young pitched three no-hit games in twenty-three years, one of them a no-man-to-first affair. Young pitched his first no-hit game in 1897, his last in 1908, eleven years later. Addie Joss pitched two no-hit games, one of them a no-man-to-first soiree. Mountjoy of Cincinnati pitched a hitless game against Toledo in 1883. Breitenstein of St. Louis pitched his first no-hit game in 1891, his second seven years later. Atkinson, Terry, Kilroy, Weyhing, Seward and other old-timers all got in their no-hit games. Borden and Devlin pitched no-hit games in 1875. But the honor of having pitched the greatest number of no-hit games goes to Jimmie Galvin, a St. Louis boy, who began in 1876 with the St. Louis Reds and wound up twenty years later with Pittsburgh.

Galvin was a great pitcher. He pitched two no-hit games within six weeks. On July 4, 1876, he held Philadelphia hitless, and on August 17 repeated against the Cass club of Detroit. The same J. Lee Richmond pitched two no-hit games within sixty days for Worcester against Chicago and Springfield in 1879. Kimber (Brooklyn, 1884), McIntyre (Brooklyn, 1904), King (Chicago, 1890) and Witte (New York, 1908) all pitched ten innings without a safe hit being made off them. King lost his no-hit ten-inning game.

One No-Hit Game a Year.

Harry Wormwood, a minor leaguer, went seven hitless innings for Fall River in 1910. Toney, now with Cincinnati, then with Winchester, Ky., went seventeen innings, struck out nineteen batters, yet lost, 1-0, May 10, 1909. Wolfgang, now with the Chicago Americans, went ten innings of a no-hit, no-man-to-first game. Justus of Lancaster, Ohio, 1910, pitched four no-hit games in one season, but these were in a small minor league. No-hit games average one a year. All told, Jim Galvin has the best record of no-hit games. He pitched four of them in major league company—two in 1876, one in 1880 and one in 1884. Galvin was a short, stout fellow, a native of St. Louis, and without doubt a very great pitcher.

So, we see, pitching a no-hit game is the event of a season. They now average about one a year in each major league. Cicotte put the fans out of expectancy quickly in 1917. The season was but four days old when he put a no-hit game on the books.

The little Wolverine had been trying for fourteen years of professional baseball life to pitch that no-hit game. He had pitched many one and two hit games. He was second pitcher in point of effectiveness in the American League in 1916. Only one and three-fourths runs had been earned off him to the game. Thus it will be seen that Cicotte was entitled to pitch a no-hit game. He kept hovering around the two-run-a-game mark during the previous summer. He was due.

Cicotte is in many respects like Jim Galvin, the greatest of no-hit pitchers. Like Galvin, Cicotte is short and stout. He attributes his early good form in 1917 to the fact that he is thinner than he has been for years. He is short and stout. Flesh piles up on his chest and under his arms. When he is fat he cannot pitch very well. Cicotte has been playing professional ball for fourteen years. He never had a great fast ball. His curve was good, he says, but when he grew fat he could not use that curve to best advantage. He had to beat the batters with something other than speed and curve. Had to poison the dogs otherwise than by choking them with butter. So he invented the "knuckle ball."

It is a freak delivery, this knuckle ball. Cicotte invented it, and is its greatest exponent. Many other pitchers have tried it, some with more or less success. Earl Hamilton did wonderful work with it in 1912. Then he lost control of it. Many others tried it. They use it now and then to this day, but Cicotte is the only pitcher who admits that the "knuckle ball" is responsible for a greater part of his success.

Ball Does Not Rotate.

The delivery itself is a variation of the old slow ball. The pitcher grasps the ball, in so far as he can, between the thumb and the knuckles of the first and second fingers. The third finger lies extended along the ball.

The result is that the sphere does not rotate. It sails or "slides" up to the batter. It may be

Ball Is a Hobo

THE "knuckle" ball is the hobo of ball-dom, its course, even when under "control," being entirely beyond the influence of the pitcher, so far as the "break" at the plate is concerned.

Without the spiral motion that causes a curve ball to do the will of the pitcher, the knuckle ball, floating up to the plate, gathers a pad of air in front of it and then veers, no one in advance knows whither.

It is a hobo!

thrown with variations of pace, slow, medium or reasonably fast.

When it is understood that the fast and curve balls are governed by very rapid rotation, it will also be understood that the "knuckle ball," coming absolutely without any rotation whatever, surprises, and, to some extent, puzzles the batter. Instead of a whizzing, spinning sphere which looks about the size of a pea, a great, big globular affair comes up, grinning like a full moon. It seems to be easy to hit. The fact is that it catches the batter off balance. He is expecting a fast one or a curve, and is "set" for that sort of ball. Here comes a lazy, loafing, soft-looking ball, seemingly as big as a football.

The ballistics of it is that just as it reaches the point where it makes good hitting, the ball takes an entirely inexplicable "shoot" and drops, it seems, into the ground.

This disappearance of the "knuckle ball" is easily explained. The science of ballistics teaches us that air packs up in front of any projected missile and forms a cushion. The density of the air just in front of a rifle bullet, or a baseball, or football, or even balloon, is greater than the density of the air on either side of said moving projectile.

To pierce this air cushion, the rifle bullet is given a rotary motion. That is what rifling is for. The bullet bores into the cushion of air as an auger bores into soft wood. If the bullet did not have this rotary or boring motion the cushion of air in front of it would divert it from its mark and make its final destination uncertain. That is why a smooth-bore musket is inaccurate in bullet delivery.

The cushion of air in front of the bullet that does not rotate diverts the missile and makes aim uncertain. The rifling of the piece gives the bullet the rotary motion essential to accuracy.

The Ball and the Air.

So it is with pitched balls. The rotary motion given them by the pitcher controls their motion. The fast ball will shoot in or up for the reason that the pitcher imparts a side or upward rotation to the sphere. The curve ball will break out or down because the pitcher gives it a rotary motion that acts when the air cushion becomes so dense that it affects the forward movement of the missile.

But the floating, nonrotating "knuckle ball" has no rotary movement to take it past the air cushion in any designed direction. It packs up an air cushion in front of it. When the air cushion becomes so dense as to impede its progression in a direct line forward, the "knuckle ball" does one of three things.

It takes a shoot either straight ahead, to the right or to the left and downward. Not even the pitcher can foretell in what direction the ball is liable to break. It is very difficult to obtain control of this ball, just as it is extremely difficult to hit any object with a smooth-bore musket. Difficulty of control is the reason why so few pitchers successfully use the "knuckle ball."

The fact that the "knuckle ball" is liable to break any one of three ways makes it extremely difficult to hit. In the first place, the batter is surprised to see the great, big, white globe of butter floating up smiling at him. He is expecting a ball of different pace and a ball that is rotating rapidly. The unexpected pace throws his stroke out of time. He may recover his balance and hit. Just as his bat is about to meet the ball the latter drops, it seems, into the earth.

The spitball always breaks one way—down. There have been pitchers who could, it is said, break the spitball three ways—in, out or down. These have been very few. Mathewson's famous "fadeaway" broke out and away from the batter. There is but one speed to the spitball and one to the "fadeaway." You cannot vary pace on them. You can throw the "knuckle ball" in as many various speeds as you can control. Cicotte says that he can change the pace on the "knuckle ball" at will, but that he never can tell just what direction it will take after it breaks.

Varies the Pace of Ball.

"I use it very frequently during a game," said the latest no-hit pitcher after his great game at St. Louis on April 14. "I vary pace on it, and very frequently I do not ask it to break at all. I throw it with some rotation. When I know a batter is going to hit—when I know and he knows that I must lay a strike over the plate—I pitch the "knuckle ball" with as little rotation as possible, so that it may break as well as possible. The different paces deceive the batter, and the break simply makes it impossible to hit safely save by the greatest fluke.

"The spitball has but one pace—fast. The 'fadeaway' had but one pace—medium slow. I can pitch the 'knuckle ball' at any pace from medium fast to dead slow.

"I began using this ball when I was a kid. It was always impossible to hit, but I found it very hard to obtain control of it. It was not until I joined Boston in 1908 that I began to get control of the 'knuckle ball.' Even then it evaded me for months at a time. When I got it going right I was hard to beat. Even now I often lose control of it.

"I joined Chicago in 1912, and began to do better with the difficult delivery. I had trouble, however, with my general control. I had been a slim kid, but I was growing fat. I weighed 135 pounds when I had my first engagement with the St. Louis Cardinals, way back in 1903. I weighed 190 pounds in 1913. Since that time I have tried to keep down to 170 pounds, but I find it hard to do so.

"This year I made a special effort to reduce my weight. I am down to 170 pounds, lighter than I have been in ten seasons. I find that my control is better than it has ever been. To this

EDDIE CICOTTE

I attribute my early success this season. You see, when I am fat I can't get my arm to follow through with my pitch. My upper arm hits my right breast and won't go any farther. Thus I have been pitching with a short, jerky motion, which is not good for control."

Cicotte is a native and resident of Detroit. He got his first engagement in his native state, at Sault Ste. Marie. After one season there the Detroit club signed him. The then manager, a clever chap named William Armour, thought Cicotte was too light to succeed in the major leagues. He sent him to Augusta, Ga.

"Armour and Detroit could not see me as a pitcher," said Cicotte, "but I did my home town a good turn when it sent me to Augusta. On the same team with me was a green young outfielder. He was wild and would make any number of mistakes and 'bone' plays, but he could hit the ball a mile now and then, he was fast, and he was burning with ambition.

"I recommended this young man to Detroit. They accepted my recommendation and signed him. He is still with them. His name is Cobb."

Sold to Lincoln.

If Detroit appreciated what Cicotte had done for it in recommending Cobb it did not show its appreciation by retaining the little pitcher. He was sent to Indianapolis. He did not stick in that company, but retrograded to Des Moines in a lower class league. He did well there. Detroit recalled him again in 1907, but could not see him as a pitcher. They sold him outright to Lincoln, in the Western League. Cicotte had another good year and Boston took a chance on him in 1908. He stuck after five years' trying.

Weight began to worry Cicotte now. He did well in 1908 and 1909, but not so well in 1910. In 1911 he had a bad year because his wife was very ill during the summer. So Boston released him to Chicago for the small sum of $1500, waiver price.

Cicotte did good work for Chicago. He has been the club's leading pitcher for several years. He cannot be worked very often, but when he does pitch, his team and the spectators know that the club that beats him will have to play ball.

Like Lejole, Dubuc, Rondeau, Fabrique, etc.,

Cicotte is a French Basque. The Basque provinces of France and Spain are peopled by an ancient race, derived genealogists do not know exactly whence. They were in France and Spain before the Celts, who were in Europe before the Teutonic races. Thus, the Basques have been in Europe longer than any other people. They have a language which differs from French and Spanish, and the people themselves are radically different from their French and Spanish countrymen.

As far as can be seen, the Basques are the original ballplayers of the world. The greatest of ancient ball games is known to the Basques by the Spanish name, "pelota" or "ball." It is known as "Jai Alai" in America, and is played in great courts all over Spanish-America. The Ice Palace in St. Louis was originally built for a pelota court during the world's fair of 1904. The ball used is harder and faster than a baseball, is about the size of a pool ball and is thrown against a rock wall by players who use curved baskets attached to the left hand for the purpose. Pelota is a wonderfully interesting game and calls for the highest type of trained athlete. Only Basques play pelota. They are an extremely vital people, and, though numbering less than 2,000,000, produce notable men. Generals Joffre and Foch, heroes of the great world war, are of Basque extraction and birth.

The Basques are a very independent, liberty-loving people. When Don Carlos was fighting to become king of Spain, he solicited the aid of the Basques. It was granted him on condition that while he might call himself king of the other provinces of Spain, he must be content to be known as president and plain Don or "Mia" in the Basque provinces. The French Basques always refused to acknowledge the sovereignty of Napoleon I., or of any other French sovereign or government of which they did not approve.

Cicotte keeps busy in winter. He has a garage in Detroit, which takes a lot of his time. He hunts and fishes whenever he can find leisure. A wife and two daughters represent his family. He is 34 years old and seems to have many years of pitching left in his right arm.

WILL HAVE COMPANY AT SISTER'S FUNERAL

Officer Will Accompany Man Who May Not Have Registered.

Commodore Keck, who formerly lived in Cedarville, made a mistake when he rode a Wabash freight train into Fort Wayne Monday morning to attend his sister's funeral. He was halted by Wabash Detective Buick. When a razor was found on him Keck was taken to jail.

Keck told Judge Kerr that he is 27 years old, and has lost his registration card. The judge does not like the story. He ordered Keck held under $100 bond until Tuesday.

"But I must attend my sister's funeral," insisted Keck. "We will arrange that," assured Judge Kerr.

The funeral of the sister, Margaret Leininger, 2338 North Clinton street, will be held at the Klehm & Melching chapel at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. One of the county deputies will accompany Keck to the funeral and after the burial will return the man to jail.

Keck is now under bond because of an attack made on members of his family at Cedarville a week ago. He threw all his relatives out of his home and then walked to Fort Wayne, where he was arrested on an assault charge.

The latest charge against Keck is that of train climbing, but Judge Kerr thinks that the man has also failed to register.

REPORT SHOWS GOOD WORK OF RED CROSS

Shipping Station Opens for Northern Indiana Chapters Today.

One of the busiest weeks of the Red Cross chapter was experienced up to Saturday night, as shown by the report of the chairman of the various departments in surgical supplies and hospital garments were also reported.

Sixty-four enrollments were recorded Saturday afternoon at the headquarters, fifty of them coming from the new auxiliary formed at Monroe, and eleven from Monroe. Several donations were also reported, $25 coming from the Howard Council, Royal Arcanum. Mrs. Marion Phares, of Winchester road, route No. 9, gave ninety cents which she obtained from the sale of flowers. Two little girls from Lakeside brought in to the headquarters $1.85, which represented the receipts from a juvenile circus given Thursday afternoon.

Children at the Guildin, Lakeside and Smart playgrounds are being instructed in the second session of the Red Cross chapter, opened Monday, although supplies will probably not start coming in for a few days. The room has been completely overhauled, with shelves and tables placed around in convenient places.

The shipping station for the 120 Northern Indiana chapters which will come under the jurisdiction of the Fort Wayne chapter, opened Monday, although supplies will probably not start coming in for a few days. The room has been completely overhauled, with shelves and tables placed around in convenient places.

GEAKE QUITS DRAFT BOARD

William Geake declares that his only reason for resigning from his place on the draft board is because of the serious illness of his 7-year-old son. The boy is now being treated at a resort in the Adirondack mountains. The father has received word that the condition of the lad is critical and he may be called to the bedside at any time.

"This exemption board task is one which should hold the constant attention of the board members until the draft act is completely completed," Mr. Geake said Monday.

"I do not want to start the work and be forced to break it off later. It is better to get another man before the work begins."

Mr. Geake declares that his action is not moved by any dislike of the painful duties which will fall to the lot of the exemption boards.

Mayor Hoesy states that he has no idea who will be the new member appointed on the second session of the board. Gustav Boerger is secretary and Dr. L. P. Drayer is the physician making up the remainder of the board.

No More to Quit.

Mr. Geake, who is one of the first men in the country to resign from a draft board after the lottery has been drawn, will be the only member of Fort Wayne boards to quit from the task about to start.

"I am going to stay with the work as a matter of patriotism, if I lose all of my medical practice," said a physician on one of the three boards, Monday. Other members of the three boards, when called by telephone, said that they had no intentions of getting out from under the responsibility about to be theirs.

"I am sure the action of William Geake casts no reflection upon him," said Mayor W. J. Hoesy, Monday. "His record as a citizen is too plain for such an insinuation to be well founded."

"The place must be filled at once," Mayor Hoesy went on. "This work of caring for the situation at hand must not be halted at this time."

Nothing definite regarding the time when they shall begin their work and the date of notifying the draft subjects has yet been received by the draft board members.

Heaps of letters relating to the mode of examination and the grounds and processes for exemption were unloaded at the city clerk's office, Monday.

First questions to be answered in writing by conscripts will be regarding their physical condition. The questions which will immediately precede the physical test are:

Have you found your health and habits in any way interfere with your success in civil life? If so, give details.

Do you consider that you are now sound and well? If not, state details. Have you ever been under treatment in a hospital or asylum? If so, for what ailment?

The three questions are to be sworn to and appear above the signature of the young man being examined.

Then comes the physical trial. Nose, throat, teeth, eyes and ears will be important parts of the examination.

When the test has been passed the appeals for exemption may be given. A booklet containing forms for preparing affidavits to support claims from army service has been presented to the board and will be given those who appear to escape the army draft.

A bundle of blank forms to be filled in when appeals are taken from the decision of the local boards are also at hand. Work will be ready to start here as soon as instructions to proceed are received.

Many Queries.

Mayor Hoesy and the office of the city clerk received dozens of letters, Monday, in regard to the drawing of the draft numbers. Many young men in doubt as to how to proceed to know their conscription numbers. Some young men wish to know if they must come back to Fort Wayne for examination when their number is called. It is the present opinion that reports for examination must be made at the place where registration was conducted.

CHAUTAUQUA

The band will also give a concert in the afternoon.

Although Fort Wayne's first chautauqua, it will not be its last. In every way it has been a success. The Redpath bureau has furnished splendid programs each day and financially the club is more than gratified. A goodly sum after all expenses have been paid will be raised.

The program this afternoon was featured by an address by George L. McNutt, of New York city, on "How to Meet the High Cost of Living." Mr. McNutt is a food expert of international reputation.

Lieut. Bowman Tonight.

Lieutenant Robert Bowman, hero of Verdun, who spent eighteen months in the European conflict and served with the allies as a soldier in the first line trenches and as a member of the field service of the ambulance corps in France, will speak tonight, following a Mother Goose festival in charge of Miss Katherine Stiles, the children's worker. On account of her congressional duties, Miss Jeannette Rankin, congresswoman, who is on the program for tonight, is unable to fill her chautauqua engagements.

Lieutenant Bowman's lecture is illustrated with views he has taken on the battlefields. He took a prominent part in both the Somme and Aisne offensives for nine months and later distinguished himself at Verdun. Because of valorous deeds he was honored with the Croix de Guerre, the Cross of War and the golden star, the highest decoration given up to that time to any foreign non-combatant.

Lieutenant Bowman is an American and returned to this country when diplomatic relations were severed with Germany. He arrived in Fort Wayne Sunday for his engagement here tonight.

CHAOS IN THE RUSSIAN ARMY

Let it act without mercy. Let it find enough courage to strike those who by their cowardice are destroying Russia and the revolution."

Referring to the threatened disaster, the telegram says: "Most military units are in a state of complete disorganization. Their spirit for the offensive has utterly disappeared. They no longer listen to orders of their leaders and they neglect all exhortations of comrades, even replying by threats and shots. Some elements voluntarily evacuate positions without even waiting for the approach of the enemy."

Refuse to Give Relief.

"Cases are on record in which an order given to give relief to a soldier in distress has been discussed for several hours at meetings and reinforcements consequently have been delayed several hours."

"These troops abandon their positions at the first shots of the enemy. For a distance of several hundred yards long files of deserters armed and unarmed, men in good health and robust, who have lost all shame and feel of duty, are proceeding to the rear. Frequently entire units desert in this manner."

RUSSIANS GAIN IN DRIVE.

Petrograd, July 23.—The Russians attacked the Germans near Krovo and Vilna, north of the Pinski marshes, and penetrated the Teuton lines for a distance of two miles, according to an official announcement made here today. The Russians captured more than 1,000 Germans but the development of success, the statement adds, is being jeopardized by the moral weakness and instability of certain Russian detachments.

Between the river Sereth Strips and Zlota Lips the Russian statement says the Austro-Hungarians continued their offensive, occupying villages. The chief of the Russian divisional staff was killed while re-establishing order among the units on the east Galician front.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S WAR NEWS

Kerensky, concededly the strongest man to be found for the task, is willing to grapple with all his widely recognized force and ability.

The war situation for the moment demands consideration chiefly at two points where the Germans have concentrated their main military efforts—the yielding position of the Russian front in eastern Galicia and the section of the French front near Craonne.

In the former war theatre there is little sign as yet of a change in the temper of the disaffected Russian troops sufficient to bring about an effective resistance to the Teutonic progress, which threatens disaster to the Russian arms.

On the western front there is a different story to tell. The desperate onslaughts of the crown prince's forces are being met with a gallant resistance by General Petain's troops and such small bits of territory as have been gained by the Germans have been dearly paid for.

Last night the German assaults were renewed on the California and Casemates plateaus for the mastery of which colossal efforts are being put forth. Some headway was made on both these elevations. But General Petain's men are clinging bravely to them both, although driven out of first line trenches. The Germans attacked the support trench on the California plateau but it was retained by the French in its entirety.

Today's official reports from the Galician front are little more encouraging than those of the last few days. While efforts are being made to restore order among the Russian forces, the Austro-German offensive between the Strips and the Zlota Lips is being pushed and additional villages have been gained by the Teutons. Toward the northern end of the Russian front the situation is different. The Russians have taken the offensive and opened up a gap two miles deep in an important sector of the German line near Krovo and Vilna, incidentally capturing more than 1,000 Germans.

Have, too, however, certain detachments appear to have been worked upon by the extremists and are fighting so indifferently as to jeopardize the development of the Russian success.

REGISTRANTS WHO

will then be appended to the registration list of their district and then immediately after the selection drawing of last Friday, just as though they had been included in the list at that time.

Officials of Provost Marshal General Crowder's office were preparing today for the great number of inquiries and requests for rulings which they expect from the local boards as soon as examinations of the men for the first quota begins. Probably it will take several days for the boards to become thoroughly familiar with their work. After that officials expect the examinations and exemptions of men or their certification to the higher boards for military duty will proceed rapidly. Within a week after the local boards begin operations the district boards also will be able to take up questions of industrial exemptions as rapidly as they arise.

He said that America had decreed that she would not permit exports to neutrals as long as these neutrals export to Germany. Germany would very shortly lose its source of support. The terrible fate, he said, had to be faced that the military authorities had entirely figured out these supplies and that nobody in authority could find an answer or give an idea from where these supplies were to come.

GERMANS ATTACK FRENCH.

Paris, July 23.—Continuing their violent attacks on the Aisne front the Germans last night stormed French trenches on the Casemates plateau, the war office announces. On the California plateau the French maintained their supporting trenches.

DUTCH COMMISSIONERS COMING.

Amsterdam, July 23.—The minister of agriculture and commerce has appointed a commission of three to proceed to America to represent Dutch interests in connection with American exports. The commissioners are Engineer Van Elbe, Hovnen Vandort, ex-vice president of the East Indian council, and Van Vollenhoven, director of the Netherlands bank.

PRESIDENT TO TAKE A HAND

board of three, as voted by the senate. The president may take a hand in some of the other conflicting sections.

President Wilson is understood to prefer the senate prohibition section forbidding manufacture of distilled liquors, but allowing the manufacture of beer and wine. The house put in a "bone dry" section. The president has heretofore opposed a congressional commission to investigate the conduct of the war, and there is no reason to believe he will favor such an amendment to the bill.

BILL BACK TO HOUSE.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—The administration's food control bill passed by the senate yesterday after more than five weeks bitter contest was back today in the hands of the house.

The house was expected to disagree to the senate amendments and the bill be sent to conference probably, where differences between the two houses will be thrashed out.

Leaders were hopeful today that the measure would be sent to the president for his signature by the end of the week. The senate prohibition sections prohibiting manufacture of distilled spirits in bond was substituted for the house "bone dry" provision and will be one of the difficulties to be overcome in conference.

Another was the senate amendment for a board of food administration of three members instead of a single member as provided in the house bill.

RECOVER ATHLETE'S BODY.

Lafayette, Ind., July 23.—The body of Earl J. (Billy) Williamson, the Purdue university basketball star, who was drowned in the Wabash river yesterday afternoon, was recovered by a searching party at 11 o'clock this morning. He is survived by his parents, three brothers and four sisters.

The amount to be asked for, $34,000, for park use, has been decided upon already. The board members expect to hand in a bill for $2,000 for salary of Carl Getz, city forester, who will resign unless given that amount.

ple's palace. Two soldiers were wounded at the first shots from the revolvers of the assassins. The guard of 150 soldiers rushed from the building and fired on the three men who attempted to escape but were lynched by the crowd. Fifteen civilians were wounded in the firing, some seriously.

STUDENTS QUELL MUTINEERS.

Petrograd, July 23.—A dispatch to the Bourgeois Gazette from Nijni Novgorod, relates that on July 17, a regiment of troops ordered disbanded for insubordination mutinied, took possession of the town and were still in control July 20. Cadets sent from Moscow to subdue them battled with revolvers, resulting in casualties on both sides and the surrender of the mutineers, who at last accounts were held prisoners. A parley with the commander of the Moscow garrison ended, nevertheless, in an agreement to surrender on control.

ADMIRAL ARRESTED.

Petrograd, July 23.—The newspaper announced that Admiral Vladimir, commander of the Baltic fleet, had been arrested for communicating a secret government telegram to sailors' committees.

DISARMING WORKMEN.

Petrograd, July 23.—The disarming of workmen, including the so-called "red guards," is proceeding systematically in connection with the disarmament of some machine guns have been recovered. The majority of revolvers were obtained at the fortress of SS. Peter and Paul, where cases just arrived from America had been broken open. According to the Russian Volliya, a third of the arms stolen since the outbreak have been accounted for. Several carts with shells were stopped on the banks of the Neva. The military authorities knew nothing about them. The drivers were arrested and the carts taken to the station.

PETROGRAD UPRISING ENDED.

London, July 23.—Dispatches received by the Russian embassy here state that the rising in Petrograd may be considered as definitely suppressed. The regiments which participated in the disturbances are being disarmed and disbanded, these advances report, and the city is being patrolled by troops.

Isolated shooting from windows has occurred, but order is being energetically restored and all suspects arrested. It is added, while drastic measures are being taken to prevent any further insubordination of criminal agitation.

EXAM FOR ROOKY OFFICERS.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., July 23.—Three hundred men at the reserve officers' training camp here from Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin today presented themselves for medical examinations for provisional second lieutenants in the regular army. Those who pass the medical examination will go before an examining board for inquiry as to their general qualifications for commissions.

EXPLODING TIRE FATAL.

Elwood, Ind., July 23.—Mrs. Martin Shores, 52, was injured fatally six miles south of here today while on her way to Indianapolis in an automobile driven by her son. A tire exploded, causing the machine to skid and turn over. Miss Inez Shores was injured seriously. Other occupants of the car received minor injuries only.

MANY DIVORCES ARE GRANTED AT AUBURN

Three Decrees Are Granted in the DeKalb Circuit Court.

(Special to The Sentinel.)
Auburn, Ind., July 23.—Severing of the marriage ties seems to occupy the greater part of the time of the DeKalb circuit court Friday and Saturday and three couples settled their marital troubles at this time. Mrs. Loretta Funk Kiger who was asking for a divorce from her husband on the grounds of non-support, was granted the same and was restored to her maiden name, Loretta Funk. The defendant did not put in an appearance. The couple had been married five years.

James A. Shull, of near Auburn, was granted a divorce from his wife, Sadie Shull, and given the custody of their three children aged 15, 14 and 6 years. Mr. Shull claimed cruel and inhuman treatment and charged his wife with neglecting her home and children. Mrs. Shull did not appear and was represented by Prosecutor James R. Nyce.

Mrs. Myrta Ginder was granted a divorce from her husband, Jacob Ginder, a farmer of Wilmington township, on grounds of non-support. The couple were married in 1900 and lived together until 1910. They have two daughters, aged 16 and 14. The plaintiff was granted a divorce and the custody of the children.

Auburn Short Items.
Mrs. C. O. Osborn, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Frank Cook, of West Ninth street, for some time, died at the latter's home Friday night, death being due to cancer. The body was taken to Bluffton, Sunday, for funeral and burial. Besides Mrs. Cook, she leaves one daughter and three sons.

Miss Joyce Kanauer of Pioneer, O., who is visiting Miss Edna Shugars, was the guest of honor at a party given at the Shugars home Friday afternoon when a company of thirty young ladies were entertained. Miss Kanauer is employed in the Ashland college, teaching expression and physical culture. She returned to her home today.

Sheriff Baltz was called upon Saturday when a suspicious acting stranger who had been hanging around the interurban station for several hours, aroused the suspicions of travelers and they called the official who asked the man to move on. The man claimed to be a lecturer. He purchased a ticket Friday afternoon for Waterloo but continued to hang around the station until Saturday afternoon, and made himself a nuisance by the many questions he continued to ask. He carried a large heavy suitcase and a winter overcoat.

A DAY WITH WAR TANKS

British Monsters Given a Deal of Attention by Their Keepers.

HUGE AND AWKWARD, BUT ARE TERRIBLE Only Small, Lithe, Strong Men Fit to Serve in a Tank's Belly.

British Headquarters in France, June 21.—(By Mail.)—Under the shelter of a green ride, about fifteen miles behind the present front line trenches, one may come upon the encampment of the tanks. The parade ground is like a distorted page from Gulliver-Lilliputian men at play with Brobdingnagian toys.

A dozen of the monsters are lying stretched out in the warm afternoon sun, being oiled and oiled and scoured by their industrious attendants who are like mere meddling pygmies beside their great steeds. Over at the edge of the parade where the level ground breaks out into ridges and hillocks, two or three of the big iron horses are seen in pairs.

Grunting and puffing, creaking and complaining they move along not with the easy stride of the story-book giants, but with the cumbersome gait of a huge muscle-bound turtle, house on back. But nothing discomposes them in their grumbling advance. They mount a terrace five feet high with the same clumsy complaining nonchalance that they negotiate a mole hill and the steady pace of their caterpillars is unchanged with their climbing up a steep slope or clattering along the level.

Tank Man Has No Snap.

The job of a tank man is no sinecure. The interior is not built for comfort. It is crowded with machinery and guns and armor and in motion the deck sways and bucks like that of a little torpedo boat in a storm. Nor is the roof high enough to prevent danger of receiving a sound thumping if one is too tall. Men for tanks are picked for small stature and slender bulk. They must be tough as nails but occupy no unnecessary space. A fat man would stick in the manhole which is alike entrance and exit. A tall man would have to spend his time in a half erect position which would interfere not only with his own efficiency but with that of everybody else on board. If you would spend a few minutes on board a tank you must have your steel helmet with you and your gas mask carefully encased in its waterproof bag, ready for emergency.

Climbing through the great manhole requires a little knack of its own. Legs first is the approved technique, although to the novice there appear grounds for the reverse process may be just as satisfactory.

Legs first, one is in danger of placing a foot or a leather clad ankle against a hot engine case, with disastrous results, but with care this can be avoided.

Spick, Shining and Plain.

Everything is spick and span shining with abundance of oil, but no superfluous luxuries of brass or nickel to take away the business-like bareness and griminess of gray black armor plate which obtrude everywhere. As in a battleship, the preferential position from the point of view of safety, is given to the engines. They lie just above the floor, stretching in a longitudinal position to the center of the craft while shafts and cranks run under a special armor casing, at the back of the cams which operate the caterpillars and the big push wheels at the rear.

The painting of the tanks is a great pastime in the tactical campment. Modern protective coloring of battlefield weapons offers a wide field for the development of the cubist art and the decorative appearance of a tank going into battle suggests that some painter who all his life had specialized in barber poles had suddenly gone amuck with paint and brush.

These Electric Fans Will Blow Themselves Away at $4.49

Remember last summer—the frightfully hot July and August days, when there wasn't an electric fan to be had for love or money?

Fan manufacturers made up their minds that in 1917 there should be no dearth of fans and forthwith turned out enough to cool the whole hemisphere.

But the perverseness of the weather took another turn and sent us a cool June, a still cooler July—and the fan men were distraught and overloaded with a supply of electric fans!

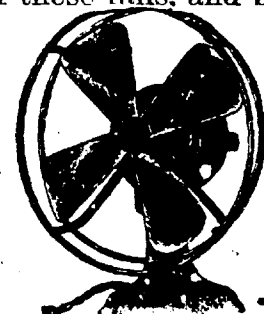

To come to the point, a manufacturer made us an offer of these fans, and by purchasing a large quantity, we offer them at

$4.49 EACH

Guaranteed for Two Years.

They're just like cut—five-inch blade size to be used on direct or alternating current; the cost of operation being very small. They can be carried from one room to another—a constant companion on hot days and nights.

Notices Will Be Sent to Those Who Have Been Drafted.

FORT WAYNE TO FURNISH 383 MEN

Many Questions Are Asked by Those Subject to First Call.

Many questions are being asked by persons whose names were drawn in the conscription for military service.

This much is known to a certainty, no one who has been drawn will be expected to do anything until he receives notice from his local conscription board.

The names of all persons who are desired to call on local boards for examination will be made public at a later date. The posting of the list will be deemed sufficient notice to charge a man with the duty of presenting himself.

However, each board will try to give notice to each person by mail as to when and where he is expected to present himself, but if the letter fails to reach its destination that cannot be made an excuse for failure to appear. It is important that each person who has been drafted and who has changed his address since the time he registered shall send his new address to the board.

According to the latest estimates Fort Wayne will be called upon to furnish 383 men for the new army. Allen county 106. Other counties in northern Indiana will be called upon to furnish the following number of men: Adams, 106; DeKalb, 88; Huntington, 139; Jay, 108; Kosciusko, 27; Lagrange, 104; Steuben, 91; Wells, 136; Whitley, 118; Noble, 43; Wabash, 182.

SPEED MANIA BRINGS DISASTER FOR YOUTH

Sack Cloth Is His Garb for a Time While in the City Jail.

Albert Crowel, 17, repented his misdeeds in sackcloth and in a dark cell of the city jail when his sins had found him out Sunday morning. He was arrested because he forged a check to buy a motorcycle. He was disrobed because the clothes he wore belonged to John Lober. Crowel was given a gunnysack for raiment until his relatives brought him clothes. Crowel's cell garment was made by cutting holes in the bottom of the sack for his legs and tying the top of the sack about his neck.

The lad was bound over to the circuit court under $500 bond Monday morning on the forgery charge. If he is sent to Jeffersonville he will be one of the youngest inmates in the prison. He pleaded guilty to the forgery complaint when arraigned in police court Monday.

Crowel forged the name of Henry Miller on a check for $15 in order to purchase a motorcycle, he admits. He was once before confined on a charge of stealing a motorcycle.

All Locked Together. Three colored men spent Sunday night in the barren cell room of the city jail. Two of the men were charged with larceny and the third was their accuser. William Newton, who rooms at 1326 Lafayette street, testified that Rufus John Johnson and George Henry took $6 from beneath his pillow Sunday evening. When he reported the theft at the station the other two men were sent for and the trio confined. The case was dismissed Monday.

Used a Beer Mug. Fred Rodenbeck, a bookkeeper, will be tried Wednesday on a charge of assault on an Italian. It is alleged that the pair had an argument in Rodenbeck's place of business Saturday night and Rodenbeck struck the foreigner with a beer mug.

Other Police Court Cases. George Martin, colored, drew a knife on a man who disagreed with his views when the couple were talking in the court house lobby, it is alleged. Martin was arrested by Detective Sergeant Spillner on a disorderly charge. He will be tried Tuesday.

Charles Fohmuth, 56, charged with mistreating children, was fined $15 and costs. No criminal charge could be proven against the man, although two boys told of undue attentions.

Cases of public intoxication were: John Mayfield, fined $25 and costs; Robert Eldred, $5; Theodore Dregmeyer, $5; Carl Shultz, $1; Charles Heester, $1. Harry Fernwell, Joe Osheski, John Curran and Clarence Warren were released. Guy Hellinger will be tried on Tuesday.

Olaf Logan, who was brought back from Logansport and who is charged with neglecting his children, will be tried on Saturday.

PRESENCE OF MIND SAVES BOY'S LIFE

Little James Foohey, 5, son of Timothy Foohey, Harrison street and Douglas avenue, had the presence of mind to draw his feet and arms up close to his body when he was knocked down by the fender of a ponderous auto truck Saturday. The big rear wheels of the machine, loaded with 5,000 pounds of ice, grazed the boy's body. If his legs or hands had come in the path of the crushing wheels they would have been cut in two.

The lad was carried to his home after the accident. His shoulder is cut and bruised and back bruised. He was able to be about the home Monday. The physician in charge does not consider the injuries serious.

TRYING TO SAVE RUSSIA

Cannot Enlist After Local Board Posts Name

REGISTRANTS WHO WOULD VOLUNTEER MUST MAKE HASTE

Provo Marshal General Crowder Issues a Ruling That Definitely Fixes Time When Man Is "Called."

MASTER TALLY SHEETS SOON TO BE SENT

Washington, July 23.—Registrants under the selective draft law are not eligible for voluntary enlistment in the regular army or the national guard after their names have been posted by local exemption boards as summoned for examination. Brigadier General Crowder, provost marshal general, promulgated this ruling today to make definite the status of men on the registration lists who now may desire to join the regulars or the national guard. The ruling which is supplementary to instructions sent to recruiting officers by Adjutant General McCain is as follows: "After a registered person has been called for military service by his local board and directed to appear for physical examination he ceases to be eligible for voluntary enlistment."

The ruling of General Crowder was necessary in order to establish definitely the time when a registered man was to be considered as falling within this prohibition. General Crowder held that posting the name of a registrant by the local board at its headquarters constituted notification to the registrant that he was called for examination, and thus set the period when he would be no longer eligible for voluntary service. Prior to that time even though his name may be among those who will be called in the first quota in any district a registrant may be accepted for the regular service as a volunteer.

Checking Official Tally. Checking the official tally sheets of the draft was about complete today and printing the master sheets which will guide local exemption boards in summoning the men for the first increment of 687,000 troops proceeded rapidly. The sheets probably will start out in the mails late today. Regulations to govern the application of the master list by the local exemption boards have already been promulgated and include a method by which any difficulties arising from confusion of serial numbers are to be overcome. The plan is to regard such registration cards as additional to the number already provided on the local lists. A separate drawing will be held by state authorities to place these additional cards and such other cards as may have come in by mail, since July 16, in order as they are drawn. They

RUSSIA APPEALS TO PEOPLE TO JOIN TO RESCUE THE NATION

Petrograd, July 23.—Following is the text of the proclamation issued by the provisional government calling on the people of Russia to oppose the dangers which threaten the nation from within and from without: Citizens: The fateful hour has struck. The German emperor's armies have broken the front of the national revolutionary army. This terrible operation has been facilitated by the criminal levy and blind fanaticism of some and the treachery of others. At this fateful moment when, taking advantage of the general confusion, the hidden forces of counter revolution can raise their heads, the remodeled provisional government clearly realizes its heavy responsibilities. It possesses, however, full and firm confidence in the strength of the great Russian people and in the rapid recuperation of the life politic, now that the contagion which has shaken the national organism has manifested itself and burned itself out in an acute crisis. The government firmly believes that the crisis will lead to recovery, not death. Strong in that belief, the government is ready to act with the energy and resolution the exceptional circumstances demand. The government regards as its first and capital task the application of its whole strength to the struggle against the foreign foe and to the defense of the new governmental regime against every anarchical and counter revolutionary attempt, without hesitating to take the most rigorous measures in its power. At the same time the government reiterates that not a drop of blood of a Russian soldier shall be shed for any foreign end, as already proclaimed to the whole world.

EMBARGO IS HARD SHOCK

German High Command Had Counted on Food Supplies as Usual. GAINED SUPPLIES THROUGH NEUTRALS That War Lords Calculated on America Is Brought Out.

London, July 23.—That high German command had based its calculations on food supplies which America has been sending to neutrals became known according to the Daily Mail, through the famous speech of Herr Erzberger, head of the Catholic party in the reichstag, made before a secret session of that body. This newspaper referred to this address as a "bombshell." Herr Erzberger remarked that although America's entry into the war was of little military value it was important owing to the extent to which Germany has depended on the neutrals for food and other supplies.

COUNTY FAIRS AGREE TO HELP IN RECRUITING

New York, July 23.—The management of twenty-two county fairs to be held during the summer and fall in all parts of the country have agreed to aid the navy department in its recruiting campaign, according to an announcement made today by the naval publicity bureau. At many of the fairs it was said posters will be displayed and billboards on fair grounds will be erected, should the navy department wish it. Several of the larger circuses have also agreed to do what they can to aid recruiting. One will carry a special recruiting tent with it during the show season, which will be turned over to the navy department for the purpose of recruiting in each town the circus visits.

HUSBAND IN PORT OF MISSING MEN

Grover Scott, 1408 Franklin avenue, was in the best of spirits Saturday evening. He kissed his wife and two small children "bye-bye" and went to the barber shop. The night swallowed him up when he left the shop. No trace of him has been gathered by his distracted wife since that time. Police have been informed and are aiding in the hunt for the young man. "He could not get into the army because of having a thumb off," said Mrs. Scott Monday. "I find that he quit his job at the Brown Trucking company Saturday. I do not know where he can be now."

Summary of the Day's War News

Unlimited powers have been granted the Russian provisional government under Premier Kerensky to grapple with the sinister forces threatening to wreck the new Russia born of the March revolution. The grant comes from the most powerful representative body in the nation, the council of soldiers and workmen's delegates and the peasants of all Russia assembled in Petrograd. The title of the ruling body, the "Government of National Safety," recalls immediately the famous committee of public safety of 1793, formed in the crucial period of the French revolution. With Kerensky serving not only as premier, but as minister of war and marine, it is apparent that vast powers are thus lodged in the hands of this one man, suggesting those of the virtual dictator. The mandate of this committee is to restore order both at the front and at home—admittedly a difficult task in the face of the powerful influence both within and without the nation working against the present regime. It is evidently one, however, with which mal notice of Mr. Geake's resignation Monday noon. The signed statement had been left with Deputy Clerk Leroy Swartz two hours before. The mayor will proceed at once to appoint a successor for William Geake, who was chairman of the board representing the city district west of Calhoun street and north of the Pennsylvania tracks, known as district No. 2. Mayor Hosey believes the draft law gives him authority to appoint the man himself and to secure the approval of the governor later. Mayor Hosey may wire Governor Goodrich in order to explain the situation and secure his approval of the new appointment Monday evening. The mayor is anxious to have the vacancy on the important board filled with all dispatch.

ALL AMERICAN AIRMEN TO GET UNDER ONE HEAD

Paris, July 23.—Plans have been completed for bringing all American aviation forces here under a single direction, working in conjunction with other military branches. The aviation corps will be planned into two classes. One will operate within 125 kilometers and the other within a range of 200 kilometers. The tactical units will cooperate directly with the troops, doing preliminary reconnoitering, pursuing enemy aviators and bombing enemy establishments. The strategic squadron in general will operate independently. They will be engaged in destroying enemy bases and supply bases. They will also take part in squadron fighting and day and night bombardments. Observation balloons will be used largely as an adjunct to the artillery. It is ordered that hereafter the names of no American officers except Major General Pershing and Major General Siebert be mentioned in news dispatches.

ARMED KILTIES MARCH CHICAGO STREETS FREE

Chicago, July 23.—The sight of British troops under arms marching through the streets of Chicago was witnessed for the first time today when a battalion of Canadian Highlanders and their regimental band paraded the downtown section. The Highlanders, who are here to stimulate "British recruiting week," came direct from New York, and as a tribute of American regard brought the colors of the Seventy-first regiment of New York.

MERCURY ON WAY TO HIGHEST POINT

Temperature Monday Gave Promise of Rivaling the High Mark.

Late Monday afternoon the mercury of the government thermometer was still climbing and evidence was given that this would be the hottest day Fort Wayne has experienced this year. At 2 o'clock, eastern time, or 1 o'clock, standard time, the temperature was 87 degrees. Thus far last Saturday was the hottest day when the thermometer registered 89 degrees as the high mark. Sunday the highest point reached was 88 degrees. Sunday was an extremely uncomfortable day as people suffered from the intense heat. A slight breeze Monday made the weather more bearable. The weather man predicts showers for tonight and Tuesday, which will undoubtedly give temporary relief. The temperature at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon was 86 degrees and at 2 o'clock 87 degrees.

HURRY MILK TO ICE, NEWEST HEALTH ORDER

"These are the sun baked days when bad milk will kill many babies," said Dr. J. H. Gilpin Monday. Put milk on ice just as soon as it is received at your home. Is the order given by the health department as a result of the sultry spell. Lay the milk bottles directly against the ice chunks. Direct contact with the ice means an added coldness of twenty degrees. Keep the milk as cold as possible. "If milk is not on ice it will be unfit for baby's use in a half hour," says Dr. Gilpin. Besides precaution in carrying for milk the health men urge that all garbage be carefully wrapped. Flies and other germ carrying insects must not be given a chance if health remains with the burning days.

KERENSKY GETS POWERS TO ACT WITHOUT LIMIT

Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates and Peasants of All Russia Vote for Safety.

COUNTER REVOLUTION IS NOW FEARED

Petrograd, July 23.—The council of soldiers' and workmen's delegates and peasants of all Russia voted today after an all night session to grant the government of Premier Kerensky "unlimited powers" under the title "Government of National Safety" for the re-establishment of public order, both at the front and at home. There are indications that the workmen's and soldiers' council, after the events of the past week and all circumstances connected therewith are apprehensive of a counter revolution. The central committee has issued a manifesto calling local organizations of the revolutionary democracy and army to be ready at any moment to rally round their political centers, namely the councils of the workmen and soldiers. The sweeping new powers were granted to the provisional government in a resolution adopted today by a combined sitting of the executive committees of the council of workmen's and soldiers' delegates and the council of peasants' delegates. The resolution which was passed by 252 to 57 reads: "Recognizing that the country is menaced by a military debacle on the front and by anarchy at home it is resolved: "First—That the country and the revolution are endangered; "Second—That the provisional government is proclaimed the government of national safety; "Third—That unlimited powers are accorded the government for re-establishing the organization and discipline of the army for a fight to a finish against the enemies of public and for the realization of the whole program embodied in the governmental program just announced."

NOBLERED MAN BULLY SOLDIER SAY CANADIANS

London, July 23.—(By Mail.)—Canadian officers on leave here from the French front, have informally recommended to American officials that American Indians be employed or enlisted for service with the American expeditionary forces. Manitobans, with the Canadians, have done excellent work at scouting in No-man's land. "The Indians with us," said a captain with the Canadian forces, whose parents live in Philadelphia, "have performed services that never could be performed by white men. The Indian of North America has it in his bones to be a good fighter. We have them in nearly every regiment. "Again and again, during the past two years I have seen them go out at night between the trenches without firing a shot, without making the slightest noise or creating the slightest disturbance, come back leading a half dozen or so Germans, from whom much valuable information has been obtained."

FORT WAYNE BOY IS GIVEN A PROMOTION

John Quinn Made Foreman of I. C. Erecting Shops at Burnside, Ill.

John J. Quinn, a Fort Wayne boy, is making good in railway work and will soon be, it is believed by his admiring friends, in a high and responsible office. Word was received here Saturday to the effect that he had been appointed general foreman of the erecting department of the "Burnside" shops of the Illinois Central company at Chicago. These are the most important shops of that company. Mr. Quinn was born, reared and educated in Fort Wayne. He learned the machinist's trade in the Washburn shops in this city, commencing the apprenticeship seventeen years ago. Later he went to the Pennsylvania shops and was for awhile a gang foreman there. Three or four years ago he went to the Burnside shops, where he passed through some minor promotions until he assumed the present responsible office. John is a brother of Thomas F. J. Quinn, the well known Pennsylvania train dispatcher.

COMMERCIAL BLANCH MEETS.

Convention of G. E. Salesmen Opened
This Morning.

The fourth floor of the big factory building of the General Electric works, on the south side of Wall street, very much approached in appearance a mechanical and electrical exhibition, rather than a convention hall. Nearly every product of the big electrical plant is on exhibition on the floor, and is taking an important part in bringing out the salient points of the various papers that are being read before the gathering. There are salesmen and "special men" from every part of the United States and Canada at the meeting, which will continue until tomorrow night. General Manager F. S. Huntington gave the opening address, which complimented the men for the part they have taken in the immense traffic the company has enjoyed the past year or two and predicting even greater achievements in a business way for the coming years. Today's program included an address by T. W. Behan on "Fractional Horse Power Division," Mr. Kline, on "Apparatus Division," Mr. Smith, on "Price Books and Contract Forms," Mr. Roberts, on "Estimates and Quotations," Mr. Hirsch, on "Compensaries and MIC Charging Sets," Mr. Archibald, on "Farm Lighting Conservators and Panels," and Mr. Towne, on "Advertising of Fort Wayne Department Specialties." After each paper a general discussion followed.

RAISED AGE LIMIT.

A Strong Man of Any Age Can Now Find Employment.

Posters from the east announce that the Pennsylvania company has practically eliminated the age limit for new employees. It announced that all men in good health and able to work will be given employment temporarily on that road. Of course when it comes to reducing the force, the old ones will be dropped out first. The General Electric works has also raised the age limit for new employees to fifty and several who are above that age and below fifty-five have been employed. The company recognizes that there are many men over fifty years old who are able and willing to perform as much labor in a day as many of the men under thirty-five years.

SOLDIER LOSES A FOOT.

George Bowman Wounded While Stealing Ride on Train.

Saturday afternoon at Ada, O., George B. Bowman, a member of the Second regiment of Ohio national guards, lost a foot when he fell from the bumper of a car as he was "stealing a ride" on the Pennsylvania extra No. 2, 087. The wounded soldier was turned over to his superior officers, who sent him to a hospital. Bowman resides at Leipsic, O. The train was in charge of Conductor S. O. Middleton and Engineer Beidenmeyer.

GEORGE PLACIER HEARD FROM.

Ray Hoffman, general foreman of the general erecting department of the General Electric works, received a post card from somewhere in France, on which was written, in addition to the address, the name George Placier. And nothing more. On the opposite side of the card was a peaceful farm scene—four or five children seated on the grass watching a number of sheep and cows grazing in a wooded field. There was nothing suggestive of war in the post card, except the absence of news. Mr. Placier is in the marine service of the French. He worked several years at the General Electric works in this city. His first service there was four or five years ago, following which he resigned to go in the United States navy, where he remained three years. Then he returned and after a course at a college at Columbus took up the surgery, which he followed one season. Re-entering the testing room, he worked a year and then left for France and the post card received by Mr. Hoffman was the first heard from him since he left the works.

FELL FROM CHERRY TREE.

Peter P. Neuman Badly Hurt at Warsaw, Sunday.

Peter P. Neuman, an air brake machinist at the Pennsylvania shops, is suffering severely at his home, 2220 Oliver street, from injuries sustained by a fall Sunday afternoon while engaged in picking cherries at Warsaw. He had ventured out on a limb, which broke and allowed him to drop to the ground, a distance of twelve or fifteen feet. His side, back and right leg were bruised, but luckily no bones were broken and the man was brought home on a train Sunday afternoon. He is unable to walk and

JOINS THE ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT.

Joseph Sowers, of the testing department of the General Electric works for the past two years, resigned Saturday and this morning left for Fort Thomas, Ky., to take service as an electrician with the government. He will join Z. M. Brown, who resigned and went to Fort Thomas three or four weeks ago to take service as an electrician.

PRESIDENT KEARNEY GOES EAST.

E. F. Kearney, president of the Washburn shops, passed through the city on train No. 28, en route from St. Louis to the east. Some of the members of the official staff of Mr. Kearney were with him; also some of the division officials. F. H. Tristram, general passenger agent of the Washburn, went through the city yesterday, stopping off a short time to look after some business.

QUESTIONS STATE EVIDENCE.

Defense in Fishback Trial Hints Witness Was Instructed.

Hartford City, Ind., July 23.—That the state's counsel operated a school at Redkey to instruct witnesses how to testify in the trial of William Fishback, charged with the murder of Roy Brown, was intimated by attorneys in the examination of Guy Lacey, called by the state today. Lacey denied that he had been instructed how to testify and had been offered $500 to find convicting evidence.

Lacey said that Fishback told him in a Dunkirk saloon, "I'll bet $100 I'll be arrested with Ray Landress for the murder, but there'll be another."

IN HANDS OF RECEIVER.

Huntington, Ind., July 23.—The C. B. & C. is again in the hands of J. C. Curtis, the receiver, who was appointed by Judge S. E. Cook in 1908, when Eben Lesh brought suit asking the appointment of a receiver. Mr. Curtis arrived in Huntington at 10 o'clock and immediately took charge of the short line. He will manage it until the date of sale, September 17. Mr. Curtis, while still receiver, had retired from active management in April to give J. M. Wilson, who bid in the road last January, a chance to demonstrate that he could make the road pay its expenses and to give him time to pay for the road.

A three-inch perpendicular gash was cut above the left eye from both sides of which brains issued to the ground. The child had been playing in the yard, which is separated from the pasture by a wire fence, through which he crawled, soon after which he was kicked.

SECOND MAN DRAWN IS BLIND.

Huntington, Ind., July 23.—Howard Sellers, the second man drawn in Huntington county, is blind. Herbert Lee, holding the first number drawn, is married and has five children. Death had been due probably to apoplexy or heart failure.

STUFF TO LOSE SLEEP OVER

CONDEMNNS PATENT REMEDY PROMOTION

National Tuberculosis Association Swats U. S. Commerce Department.

New York, July 23.—Recent action of the United States department of commerce in recommending China to American patent medicine interests as a good field in which to develop their business, is unanimously condemned by anti-tuberculosis workers all over the country through a resolution adopted by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis made public today.

It is maintained that the information and advice on this subject given in the department's special consular report No. 76 practically places a branch of the United States government on record as promoting a traffic that has been condemned as an evil by every reputable medical or public health body in the country, both official and unofficial. This is of particular moment to anti-tuberculosis workers in view of the fact that the sale of alleged "consumption cures" constitutes one of the most tragic phases of the patent medicine traffic.

The National association in its resolutions severely criticizes the department's action in these words:

"Resolved, that the National association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis condemns such action on the part of the United States department of commerce, and that the executive secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the secretary of said department, urging that hereafter the influence of the United States government should not be used in support of the patent medicine business."

The National association estimates that not less than $20,000,000 is invested in the business of manufacturing and exploiting fake cures for tuberculosis, and that the annual income from these concerns and individuals is $15,000,000. About one-third of this amount is spent for advertising, leaving a profit of $10,000,000 a year, which is characterized by the association as "blood money" taken from ignorant consumptives. There are over 500 of these so-called fake tuberculosis remedies listed. No drug or specific cure for this disease has yet been found, it is declared; but, if discovered early enough, tuberculosis may be cured by proper medical direction and the application of fresh air, rest, and good food.

It is pointed out that China has not yet recovered from the effects of the opium habit that was foisted upon it by western civilization and that it is particularly unchivalrous of the United States government to help foist a new evil upon this people while they are in the throes of reorganizing their society on a more intelligent and democratic basis.

YOUTH WHO HAD FALLEN IS BUT SEMI-CONSCIOUS

Howard Mannier Hovers Between Life and Death in Hospital.

Howard Mannier, 17, who lives on Lillian avenue, rural route No. 4, is a patient in the Lutheran hospital with only a slight chance of recovery. He was thrown over the handlebars of his motorcycle Sunday when the machine struck a rut in the road. His skull is fractured, his nose almost torn from his face and his body lacerated.

He took a test trip on his machine. When Mannier neared the bridge his companions heard a crash. They ran to the scene and found the youth unconscious. Paul and Albert Hohnman, who were at a farm house near by, gave the use of their automobile to bring the wounded boy to Fort Wayne. He has never fully regained consciousness since placed in the Lutheran hospital. But slight hopes for his recovery are held out.

Brand New Way to Remove Hairy Growths
Actually Removes Roots and All.

The vexed question of how to completely banish superfluous hair has been solved at last! By means of the new phelactine process, the hairs entire, roots and all, come out before your very eyes—easily, harmlessly, "quick as a wink." It is so different from the depilatory, electrical and shaving methods, you simply must try it to fully appreciate its remarkable advantages. Phelactine is perfectly odorless, non-irritating, non-poisonous—a child could use it without the least injury. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth and hairless, no one could tell you ever had a moustache or other hairy growth. If you will procure a stick of phelactine and follow the simple instructions, you will certainly be astonished and delighted with the result—or the druggist will refund the price upon request.—Advertisement.

Cleaning Out the Moths!

Despite Jail She is Picketing Again

Jail failed to cure Mrs. Hopkins, one of the suffragists sent to the workhouse for picketing the white house, and pardoned later, for she resumed picket duty as usual. The president and Mrs. Wilson greeted her as they passed in their automobile.

How to Overcome Foot Troubles

If you have tired, burning, aching feet, corns or painful callouses, you know only too well the misery and torture that they bring. It is unnecessary, however, to suffer longer with any of these foot troubles. Go to your druggist and get a small jar of Ice-Mint. Rub a little of this cooling, healing discovery on your tired, aching, corn-pestered, swollen feet. Instantly the pain of corns and callouses vanishes. And shortly the most stubborn and painful hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, or aching callouses, will shrivel up and lift off easily with the fingers, roots and all.

Ice-Mint costs little. Is easy and delightful to apply and aside from removing every painful corn or callous will keep your feet cool, easy and comfortable even on the hottest days. Try it. There is nothing better.—Advertisement.

Vol. LXXXIV. No. 298

MONDAY, JULY 23, 1917.

A LITTLE PATIENCE WILL PAY.

The suffering suffs mobilized in Washington for guerilla warfare on the president are to have unmolested privilege to picket the white house, to march their solemn rounds and to carry their emblazoned banners at their own sweet will, personal convenience or obligation to soldierly duty. Having got near a score of picketers out of a Virginia work-house with its mangy associates and its vermin and its jail soil and its uninviting toil and still more uninviting fare, the president has let it be understood that future interference with the ladies will be distasteful to him. That is not doing what the picketers want him to do and expect him to do, but it is doing a good deal.

The militant women want President Wilson to pass a law giving universal suffrage and put it in the constitution as an irremovable and unamendable part of the great American palladium. These functions usually are initiated by congress and approved by the people through indirect referendum in which the legislatures of the states functionate. But that's neither here nor there. The militants want the president to pass that law or make congress pass it or give them "the vote" without any law or something or other and want him to "do it now." The National Woman Suffrage association wants the same result, but recognizes that there is a prescribed course and that the president is just as powerless as itself to make congress do anything. That has been given emphasis in these later days. The national association is preparing to urge its claims upon congress and we believe that if this great body of women, numbering something more than two millions of members, will bear patiently with congress and the president until the most pressing of the war measures are disposed there will be excellent chance of a friendly hearing and perhaps something more to the point.

Mrs. Catt, president of association, and other leaders of that body have besought the Congressional union, the small body of suffragists under whose auspices the white house picketing proceeds, to cease trying to annoy the president and to heckle congress while the vital measures of the war were pending, but even this appeal of sister to sister in the name of a common cause, has failed to influence the unionists, who appear to be more interested in their martyrdoms and its notoriety than in forwarding "votes for women."

Universal suffrage is coming to the women of America. The war will set it forward here as it has set it forward in Great Britain. President Wilson is friendly to the cause and doubtless there is a majority in either branch of congress ready to support a resolution to submit the Anthony amendment to the states. Whether the votes necessary to make such a resolution valid can be had at this time may be doubted, though there has been a notable loosening of sentiment toward national enfranchisement of women and when congress can get to it there may be no trouble attending the matter. When it does come it will be the patience and the good sense of the workers in the National Woman Suffrage association and not the spectacular and silly tactics of the Congressional union that will have achieved the victory.

RUSSIA'S BAD PLIGHT.

There lie ahead of Russia critical times. The wisest minds and the stoutest hearts in all of that new and unformed mass of democracy will be needed to save the nation from its ruthless foes that assault it from without and its insidious enemies that plot against it from within. It is plain that Russia has more to fear from the elements of disorder at work among the people inciting resistance to authority and scheming against stability of government than she has to fear from the German armies massed along her frontiers. The Germans may beat Russia down as a military factor, put her out of the war, exact indemnities and rape her of territory, but with that leave her free to dispose of her internal affairs as the people may elect; but if Russia must fight Russians to preserve national unity there cannot be much hope that she will succeed. Anarchy if not strangled will tear the nation to shreds and leave it to be preyed upon from the outside and besides that set the people to preying upon one another.

When the new offensive of the Russian armies was launched the first of the month and notable successes were won by the brilliant Korniloff, it looked as though authority had gained the upper hand and that the spirit of loyalty and the fighting morale of the troops had been aroused and restored through the efforts of Kerensky. Events of the past few days have well-nigh destroyed every hope that sprung up three weeks ago. On the battle front Russian regiments have given way to permit unmolested advance of the enemy. In Petrograd mutinous regiments have defied authority and fought with the loyal troops of the capital garrison. Anarchists who preach disorder for disorder's sake and hireling agitators who foment internal strife for the German gold they jingle have made common cause against the government. Prince Lyoff, the premier, a great democrat and one of the superb figures of Russian statesmanship, has found it desirable to quit the provisional government. Young Kerensky has become premier and is exercising practically the powers of a dictatorship. Into no better hands could supreme authority to strive for the fencing of Russia from her war foes and for the saving of the land from the forces of disorder descend than into the hands of this amazing young genius. It may be that for the time the provisional government will have to completely abate its complaisance to the free and easy spirit of unqualified democracy that pervades the civil masses and the armies and manage matters with strong hands. If Russia is going to be a democracy and go forward to prosper in material ways, to build up a capable and self-governing people and to found a state strong enough to hold itself together and fend its territories and its rights, there cannot be much further going in the direction pursued since last March.

Events moved with such swiftness in Russia when the revolution broke loose that every national mooring was torn up and the country has been drifting until it finally has brought up in very rough water. Finland is attempting to cut loose and establish complete political independence. The Ukraine presents a problem of menacing difficulty, the soldiers and sailors of Kronstadt have been in a state of mutiny and asserting independence for several weeks and other provinces are rebellious and adding both to the din and to the danger.

Russia is in a bad way when her people will lend no ear of reason to men like Lyoff and Kerensky. Her strong men must save her from her foes and from her ignorant and disordered masses who lately have freed themselves and have a fatuous notion that that is all there is to it. Once Russia plunges herself into a civil war or into unbridled anarchy, as the prospect seems to flatter, the people will understand the need of leadership and strength in their government.

A WORK THAT CANNOT BE OVERDONE.

There is constantly increasing call for the supplies made by the Red Cross branches. There are not enough workers in this department of service to the nation in war. Here in Fort Wayne, the Red Cross chapter numbers some eight thousand members and a vast amount of work is going ahead, yet the volume that is done, great as it is, does not answer the demand. This seems to be true over practically the whole of the country.

Workers are needed for the Red Cross service at home. It should be borne in mind that this service is just as necessary, just as patriotic and just as pressing as service at the front. America has not only her own soldiers to look out for in the matter of Red Cross supplies, but the soldiers of some of her allies. There is a shocking dearth of even the simplest and most elementary things on some of the battle fronts, where sick and wounded men suffer agony wholly needless and in some cases go to death that might easily be escaped save that hospital supplies are wanting.

America is now the only country fighting on the side of democracy that is able to provide these supplies and America is abundantly able to do it. It needs only that there be plenty of workers to turn out the things most commonly needed. Almost every woman can devote some measure of her time to this work. Some are today giving practically all of their time to it. This is most worthy on the part of such as can do it, but it is not necessary in all cases, nor any great percentage of them. All who are able doing what is reasonably possible without neglect of domestic concerns would serve the country admirably.

The senate at length got through with the food control bill and produced something the house will not stand for. Perhaps that was the idea.

DOG DAYS.

I'll sing a curious little song.
Perhaps you'll find it dull and dreary:
In truth, I drive the Muse along,
And often notice she is weary.
To sing of dog days I'll confess
Requires a lot of nerve and notion;
Still, if you'll bear with me, I guess,
You'll save lost motion.

When Sirius upon the scene
Climbs upward with his constellation,
The other stars feel real mean,
And drive the world to consternation;
Poor mortals must, perforce, throw fits,
Or seek the heart-destrorying throes;
Freak baths allure, the mud and silt
Preserve our graces.

The angry stars get jealous now
Of Sirius, who roars and blusters—
He stirs all heaven to a row
With hypocondriac-like fustlers.
Throughout this time when flies abate
Our beam refuse to let us swat them,
This heavenly bully drives us daft—
We know we've "got them."

Our cows—they give us buttermilk;
Our pigs break through our beds of tulips;
Our silk worms all refuse to silk,
We keep alive by mock mint juleps;
Just how we strive through heat and wet
Proves that our life's no bed of clover—
Well—let us sweat and swear and get
These dog days over!

CHINA IS DONE WITH THE MONARCHY SAYS AMERICAN MISSIONARY LATELY HOME

By TYLER BENNETT.

Returned Missionary to China.

"Too bad you are leaving so soon," remarked a Chinese friend, the day I left Peking early last month. We had just received news that the revolting military governors had set up their provisional monarchical government in Tientsin and were preparing the bombs with which they expected to blow up the young and feeble Chinese republic and thus clear the way for the restoration of the old monarchy.

"There is likely to be a good show here in a week or ten days," he continued. "I am already bidding for the moving picture privileges for the Wang Tai flats and run special trains from Peking."

"How can you talk like this," I exclaimed, "when the fate of your country is trembling in the balance?" He smiled blandly, as orientals will, and assured me the situation was not serious. When I reached Tokio a week later, I learned from confidential sources the revolution was expected to be little more than an opera bouffe affair. More recent dispatches confirm this.

Yes, China has already tasted of republican government and likes it.

In the last four months I have been in ten provinces and have talked with hundreds of leading Chinese.

Although republican government was so new to China six years ago that a new word had to be invented and incorporated into their vocabulary to convey the idea, nevertheless these people with striking unanimity told me, "We shall never go back to the monarchy."

At length I went to an old gentleman, a foreigner, who has served China forty years in a government capacity. "How does it happen," I asked, "that these Chinese who, until so recently, have lived under an absolute monarchy, are now so loyal to the republican government?"

"Well," he said, "there are many reasons. In the first place, the Chinese are naturally democratic and always have been so in spite of Peking."

"A more immediate reason is this—the missionaries. It was the American missionary who started China toward a republic."

When a man once gets into his head the idea of brotherhood, whether his skin is black, or white, red or yellow, he stops kow-towing to monarchy.

When a man learns that he is a brother, autocracy gets onto the toboggan.

The Chinese Christians have led the fight in China for constitutional government. In the parliament recently adjourned in Peking, more than forty members were Christians, and C. T. Wong, the leader of the Kuo Ming Tong, and vice president of the senate, used to be general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

I am well persuaded, after the most careful investigation, that my aged friend is correct. The American missionary, not intentionally, but, nevertheless, actually, brought republicanism to China.

Furthermore, I am just as sure that, in spite of the long struggle which lies before the new republic, China will never, never go back to autocracy or a Manchu monarchy.

that Ireland may soon be facing starvation. In these matters the kaiser has a way about him encountered nowhere else in history.

German couriers entered Norway, a friendly country, to plant explosives in Norwegian ships. German consuls kept account of the sailings of Norwegian vessels so that U-boats could be handy to meet and sink them. A secret wireless station was maintained on an island off the coast of Norway and from this vantage a wide view of the sea was obtained, submarines signaled and neutral sailors sent to their death.

If Norway breaks off relations with Germany or goes farther and gets into the war, the Prussian press will foam at the mouth again and say that British money has bribed the statesmen of Norway, that Northcliffe has bought up the Norse press, that when all is said and done the Norwegians are a lot of swine and it becomes the duty of Germans to their German god to wipe this degenerate race off the face of the globe.

Save five or six nations, not one of the 21 now fighting Germany or carrying on no diplomatic exchanges with it was an enemy to begin with. Most of the world had nothing but admiration for the greatness of German achievements, nothing but liking toward the German people and friendliness toward their government. But the policy of Berlin would not permit the maintenance of friendliness in self-respecting capitals. It abused neutrality, it murdered neutrals. It sowed discord, practiced bribery, used the property of the impartial from which to operate against the enemy. In the case of Norway, it not simply preyed on Norwegian shipping but also used that country as a base for the purpose. Its own crimes have brought the world against Germany, not the persuasions or intrigues of the foe.

UNITED STATES WILL LEAD WORLD BY 1918 IN AIRPLANE MAKING

(By BASIL M. MANLY.)

There will be no such disgraceful delay in the airplane program after congress passes the bill as the public has seen in ship construction.

The minute the $639,000,000 aviation appropriation is signed by the president, telegrams will be flashed from the war department to airplane and engine builders to rush the orders placed tentatively when the program was agreed upon.

For military reasons no details are made public; but on the basis of confidential information I can announce the plans for spending this enormous sum have been carefully worked out and will be pushed with greatest speed.

For the present attention will be concentrated on constructing training planes and preparing additional instruction fields.

A standard type of training plane has been adopted and large numbers already built in American factories for the British and they have given excellent service more than two years.

The plan is for these factories to rush production, while other inexperienced companies are being reorganized and taught to build these simplest of all flying machines. A first month production of less than a thousand planes will increase as new factories swing in, to a monthly output of several thousand training planes in about four months.

Then the older, experienced factories will begin quantity production of the more complex and delicate

THE LINE-UP ON GIRLS' DAY

The line-up will be four abreast on Girls' day, Wednesday, July 25. Girls, 10 years of age and under, should assemble on the tower side of the pavilion and face the depot, while those above 10 should line up on the river side and face the grove. Headed by the band, the parade will move to the grove hand stand, where the new queens, principal Toledo Junior High School, whom all the girls in Fort Wayne know. Two-thirds down the parade column, the American flag and drum corps will lend its inspiring march step to the marching girls. It has been difficult to procure the extra quality clump dyed flags used in former years on account of the great demand made all over the United States upon the manufacturers. Only 1,200 flags have thus far been secured. Hundreds of girls in Fort Wayne have three or four flags procured in former years at Robinson park. Every girl in the parade should carry the flag this year above all other years. Therefore, that none may be disappointed, Manager Williams would regard it as a mark of unselfishness and loyalty if the girls of Fort Wayne would bring their flags with them. Hundreds of girls have never been in the White Dress Parade and will enter this year for the first time, and Manager Williams wishes that these girls receive the 1,200 flags now on hand. If the day be pleasant and the sun smiles, two thousand girls will be in line this year.

Uncle Harry Explains the Peace and Revolution Rumors From Germany

"There's something about Germany that I wish you would explain to us, Uncle Harry," said Helen. "Be glad to, if I can," answered Uncle Harry. "But that's a pretty big order."

"Well, it's this," said Helen. "For weeks there have been dispatches and articles in the paper saying that there are rumors from Germany that the German people may rise in revolution and overthrow the kaiser and the imperial government. Why do people and the workmen in the factories and the soldiers," answered Jimmy. "And the reasons the soldiers joined with the workmen in the revolution were that they, that is, the soldiers, suspected that the czar and his ministers were not doing all they could to help the Russian people get food, and they suspected that the czar was not playing fair with them," explained Uncle Harry. "It is pretty generally known now that the czar's government did not furnish the Russian solgining of the war?" asked Jimmy. "Many of them are, of course, but many have also begun to think for themselves and ask pointed questions," said Uncle Harry. "And many, many more German people would be thinking of revolution if the German newspapers were allowed to print all the news from the rest of the world. But in spite of the government, that news is getting into Germany just the same, and it is spreading among the people."

"Do you think the Russian revolution has changed the ideas of any of the German people?" asked Joe.

"Most assuredly," answered Uncle Harry. "You may not remember it, folks, but for years before the war started the German government used every opportunity to frighten the German people into believing that the czar and his government and the Cossacks of Russia were just waiting for a chance to sweep down over Germany and into the Balkan states, and capture and rule over the greater part of central Europe."

And in July, 1914, just before the war started and Russia was mobilizing her millions of soldiers, the German government flashed the word all over the German empire: "Look out now! the great Russian bear is going to gobble us all up." Millions of Germans were unquestionably frightened and deceived by that warning. But since then, everything in Russia has changed. The czar and his government have gone. The Russian people, speaking freely for the first time, through their provisional government, the duma and the all-Russian council of workmen and soldiers' delegates, have declared that they have no desire to overrun and gobble up Germany or any part of central Europe. Russia has said she does not seek Constantinople or the exclusive right to the Dardanelles. Now don't you suppose that this new Russia is making the German people think?"

"I do," said Helen. "And besides there have been a good many food riots in different parts of Germany, haven't there?"

"Yes, there have been a good many food riots in Germany, more, I believe, than the outside world knows about," said Uncle Harry. "And don't forget, children, that millions of German people have lost brothers, sons and fathers in the war. And don't forget that since the war started, one neutral country after another has dropped its neutrality and joined the allies, until today almost all the leading nations of the world are fighting Germany and the central powers of Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey."

"Maybe the German people are beginning to wonder what is wrong with their government that almost the entire world has turned against them," said Jimmy.

"I haven't any doubt but that many of them are asking themselves that very question," added Uncle Harry. "And the more the Germans ask that question, the nearer the kaiser is to landing where the czar landed."

Editor's Note—Uncle Harry will be glad to answer inquiries, either in this column or by mail, provided letters are signed with the full name and address of the persons writing. The correspondents' names will not appear in the articles. (Copyright, 1917, by The M-C Syndicate, Philadelphia, Pa.)

NEW ROOMING HOUSE ON WEST WAYNE STREET.

Some time ago the beautiful home of the Drs. Porter, 209 West Wayne street, was sold to one of Fort Wayne's prominent business men, and today the word is abroad that same has been leased for a number of years to Mrs. O. G. Reuter, who, as soon as the home is vacated, will completely refurnish this partial home as a modern rooming house.

This magnificent home will make an ideal rooming or boarding house, and it is the intention of Mrs. Reuter to furnish the place and surround herself with such people that it will be a home for her guests, and not simply a rooming house.

The house is complete in its appointments, the first floor has large, airy rooms and the dining room is unusual in size and arrangement.

This room is thirty-three feet long and has a fireplace and built-in sideboard, with other arrangements that add to comfort and convenience.

The second floor has ten large bedrooms and two baths, spacious halls with plenty of light and windows. An electric pump connected with three large cisterns will furnish an abundance of soft water for the baths, another convenience not found in many rooming houses.

think that the war may end with a revolution in Germany?"

"I don't believe the people in Germany are thinking anything about starting a revolution; almost all the men are in the army and lots and lots of the women are working in the factories making munitions," said Joe.

"I'll answer your question in a minute, Helen," said Uncle Harry. "But first I must explain a few things to this young man."

"Isn't that so, Uncle Harry?" asked Joe.

"Part of what you say is correct," explained Uncle Harry. "It is true that most of the men, and many boys of eighteen and nineteen in Germany are in the army, and it is also true that thousands of women are working in the munitions factories, but—"

Uncle Harry turned to Jimmy and said: "Jimmy, who was it started the revolution in Russia that overthrew the czar and the Russian imperial government?"

"The women who were starving,"

Uncle Harry said.

Herbert Heine, of New Haven, reported to the police Saturday night that his machine was stolen from the corner of Harrison and Berry streets Saturday evening. It has not been recovered.

Magley will come for his automobile Monday. The police, however, are most interested in the ownership of the two coats, which they believe belonged to the party that went joy-riding in the auto.

Police are wondering to whom the two coats found in a stolen automobile belong. The machine was abandoned on Superior street late Sunday night. It was stolen several hours before on the Decatur road, near the city limits. The car belongs to Milton Gird Magley, of Craigville.

A night patrolman saw two couples leave the machine on Superior street. When he reached the automobile he could find no trace of the men and women. It is thought that the machine was in disorder and was hurriedly abandoned because approach of the policeman was noted.

Home Budget is Needed to Cut Down Expenses

(BY BIDDY BYE.)
Housewives who have never considered their income as a whole and proportioned it carefully to the various needs of the family have now more than personal economy to think about—for planning household expenditures is a patriotic service.

The business man who does not know the outgo of all departments of his "household" is well on the way to failure.

A careful study has been made of the budget for an income of $1,500 a year, which is representative of many American families. The usual designation of five individuals is considered to compose the family—husband, wife and three children under twelve years.

Of the $1,500 income the largest amount is allowed for food, 30 per cent; shelter gets 20 per cent; clothing 18 per cent; operating expenses, such as heat, light, gas, telephone, laundry, service, etc., 10 per cent; and amusements, vacations, insurance, sickness and all other expenses 22 per cent.

The allowance for food is $450 a year; $37.50 a month, less than $10 a week.

Having the monthly allowance before her, the housewife knows just what she has to count on and by a little calculation and observation she can figure on the food cost per day, per meal, or per individual. If she will go to the market herself every day, pay cash for her purchases and sit down for five minutes at her desk after marketing she will have no need of periodical reckonings like the visits of the public accountant in the business office.

Experts of the bureau of labor figure out of every $100 spent for food almost one-third goes for meat. They also claim most families rely for the mainstay of their diet on the most expensive foods, while the cheaper staples, just as high in food value, as beans, rice and cornmeal—are used sparingly.

So long as meat, fish and eggs, rather than the cheaper cereals and vegetables, predominate in the diet, food prices will continue to be a burden to all.

Taking Care of Germs is a Self Interest

By BIDDY BYE.
We should not overlook the fact that the highest patriotism as well as self-interest demands we give our first thought to preparedness against disease attacks in our own homes and conservation of our own and our family's health. We should be particularly careful about the water we drink, as it composes 95 per cent of our bodies.

The day of idealizing the old oaken bucket is passed with the nursery eulogy of the fly. Today the modern and efficient housewife sees in each of them a prolific breeding ground for germs.

To make perfectly sure your drinking water is sanitary, inquire if your city's waterworks are using chlorinated lime to purify all water running through the mains. More than 100 cities, including New York, are doing this. Is your city, Mrs. Housewife, doing this?

Every housekeeper should have a box of this disinfectant, recommended and used by the United States government, always at hand. It should be used in the garbage can, in sinks and drain pipes, in bathrooms and cellars and refrigerators.

One authority says chlorinated lime is twenty-five times more effective as a germ killer than the usual application of carbolic acid and states one pound of chlorinated lime will disinfect thoroughly 8,000 gallons of sewage. It not only has no odor, but makes garbage cans, toilets and all other necessary waste receptacles odorless.

WHITE OF EGG GIVES BROWN GLAZE TO PIES

To attain the attractive brown glazing which the pastry chef's pies always have brush a bit of white of egg over the top crust before setting the pie in the oven to bake.

To prevent a fruit pie from having a soggy under crust brush the lower crust with white of egg before putting the fruit in.

Before baking either pies or cakes the oven should be heated and tested with a piece of white paper. Light both burners and place a piece of white paper on the shelf in the center of the oven. When the paper is a golden brown the oven is ready for the cake or pies.

A few minutes after starting the baking turn the gas down half way. It is better to turn both burners down than to turn one out completely, as the former method keeps the heat even throughout the oven.

THE GREAT AMERICAN HOME

KEEPING MAID IN THE HOUSE TOO EXPENSIVE, SAYS WIFE OF THE NATION'S PLANT WIZARD

By JACK JUNGMEYER.

Santa Rosa, Cal., July 23.—"If you must keep a maid, don't have her live in the home. It's too expensive for both housewife and domestic, and is fair to neither."

This is the advice of Mrs. Luther Burbank, wife of the celebrated plant wizard, who believes she has solved many of the servant problem perplexities.

"To get the best class of help, and cheerful, efficient service," she said, in the first newspaper interview ever granted, "arrange a working day schedule such as most other employees have, and insist that the maid have her own lodgings."

"This arrangement takes women out of the servant class. Their feeling of independence results in far greater satisfaction all around. They go home to their own life and interests every evening and return with renewed energy and interest in their tasks next morning."

"It pays in more ways than none. Wages in this case will have to be a little higher, but as a matter of fact it is in the end the cheaper course for the housewife."

"You serve the help but one meal a day. She takes care of her own laundry. You are not giving up a room to her. She is not, as in the other case, a boarder at your home. You are not distracted by her personal cares and sorrows, while the maid, on the other hand, has a period of real rest and relaxation."

"When working by the day, help doesn't feel imposed upon, no matter what the household tasks assigned, where otherwise many requests are regarded as unwarranted. An undertow of disagreeable feeling and antagonism is thus avoided."

"I have followed this plan for a year and find it an ideal arrangement. I have one servant and she seldom works eight hours a day. The fact that I pay her a good wage wouldn't justify me in feeling that I owned all her time."

"No man or woman should own all of any other person's time. Each person should have his own home and social life and diversions."

"This is all the more essential since the average home is not constructed to accommodate servants. Consequently they are chucked off into the basement or garret, in dark, miserable rooms which can not inspire cheerful, efficient work.

"And when you board a maid you are virtually compelling her to pay more for her food than she can afford, because your table is more expensive than her own would be, and you take the cost of these meals out of her wage. It isn't fair. It doesn't produce the best results.

"The solution of the servant problem, I am convinced, lies along the lines I have here suggested."

WHY GERMANS FOLLOW OUT ORDERS

A MERICANS who take orders from nobody find it difficult to understand why a great and educated people like the Germans can eat, drink, dress themselves, walk, talk, sleep, get up and wash their faces according to the orders of one man, William Hohenzollern.

Americans can understand why the Germans should be for Germany. Why Germans should be for, not Germany, but the Kaiser is something that Americans can't get around.

Hardest of all to understand is why the German people can send their sons to hardship and death when the six sons of this one man, William Hohenzollern, some of them lie officers, have not received a scratch in this terrible war.

In other words Americans do not know or understand German history, especially Prussian history, or how the house of Hohenzollern achieved its unique prestige and power over a great people.

There are historians who say that the Hohenzollerns have molded the German people to their will, changed the character of the race, and made it over, not German, but Hohenzollern.

To accomplish such a thing a family must produce remarkable men. Thus the story of the Hohenzollerns is worth relating.

First let these conditions be understood. Wedged in between hostile countries, Sweden, France and Russia, often a battlefield for the wars of outside nations, as Belgium is today, tilling a rocky, sandy, boggy and unkind soil for a living, the German people had to work so hard that they had little time for thought of forming governments of their own.

Autocracies were the governments of the day. Liberty flourished only in England, which was free from invasion; in the inaccessible mountains of Switzerland and the Basque Mountains of Spain, where land was poor and undesirable. A democracy could not live in open Germany, surrounded by and at the mercy of autocracies. So being too busy working the Germans took the best government given them, an autocracy. And it must be said that the Hohenzollerns have been the best of autocrats.

Germany was open to invasion by autocrats. This explains why one branch of the German race went to England and founded a democratic system of government, which has since become world-wide; the Germans who remained in Germany had to submit to autocracy.

Hohenzollerns and Bourbons. It may be asked why did not the Germans throw off the Hohenzollern yoke when the French got rid of the Bourbons? The answer is that the Hohenzollerns were much better, kinder and more capable autocrats, better governors than the Bourbons, and that they kept a great standing army to overawe people. Then Prussia was a small country, some 4,000,000 to the 20,000,000 of France and hence easier to overawe. The Prussians did not have the great grievances against the Hohenzollerns that the French had against the Bourbons. Also, the Hohenzollerns were stronger men than the French kings.

When it is understood that the Germans of Roman times were the most liberty-loving people in the world, free as air, that a branch of the German race founded the great democracies of the world, the subjection of the German people to the house of Hohenzollern becomes all the more remarkable.

The Germans of the times of Caesar, about 50 B. C., were the very opposite of the Germans of today. They lived in forests, each man was a law unto himself. The only chiefs, leaders or kings they acknowledged were in wartime. In peace the individual German was as free as the American pioneers. He cherished that freedom. He acknowledged no chief but himself.

Those who know the Germans of today will see how utterly different the present-day German is to his ancestor. The Germans are now hard workers, great agriculturists, community dwellers, governed by orders in every action.

This tremendous ethical change has been due in no small part to the labors of one powerful family—the house of Hohenzollern.

Good Business Men.

Speaking broadly, the men of the house of Hohenzollern have been good business men, far-seeing, hard-headed and unflinching hustlers. They have been far-seeing, men, fellows who, having come into possession of a few square miles of swamp and bog in Brandenburg, labored incessantly to increase their possessions and, according to their view of it, increase the possessions and prosperity of their people.

The Hohenzollerns are akin to the American farmer who is always coveting the "next eighty acres," and who works hard until his lands grow from an original quarter section, 160 acres, to half or may be an entire county. Very often these thrifty farmers are fine agriculturists. They get out of the ground what they can and treat the ground right. So they hate to see shiftless and thriftless "boun' doc" farmers owning land about them. It is easy, too, for these men to feel that a man who does not get all the land is capable of producing should not own a farm.

So it has been with the Hohenzollerns.

KAISER, KAISERIN and GRANDCHILDREN

They have been great developers. They coveted their neighbor's goods, 'tis true, but very often the neighbor, in their point of view, was a bad farmer, who was not worthy of owning good land.

This trait crops out in the seizure of Belgium and Serbia.

It is the great characteristic of the Hohenzollerns. They have been good husbandmen. They have craved land. Sometimes they bought it for cash. Sometimes they fabricated what, in their minds, were perfectly good titles to land and made good these titles with the sword. But always the Hohenzollerns tried, first, the easiest methods. If they could buy at a fair price, and had the money, they bought. If they could marry into fair provinces they married into them. If they could lay claim to other provinces or counties or pieces of land or cities, by way of legacy, they laid such claims. Last of all, when they could attain their ends by no other means, they just went out and "jumped" by force the other fellow's claim.

Disliked to Fight.

Many people have an idea that the Hohenzollerns have always been freebooters, men who robbed for the fun and excitement of robbing. Nothing can be farther from the facts in the case. The Hohenzollerns have always been business men, robbers, if you will, but they have never acted precipitately or without full consideration, and, above all, without full preparation. They disliked to fight, but when they made up their minds that they had to fight to gain their ends they fought just as William II, in fighting, after full preparation, with the utmost consideration and with a terrific first punch. The Hohenzollerns have always been slow to hit, but when they hit they hit hard.

Nothing in all the history of this famous and, in many ways, great family is so indicative of its character as was the manner in which it prepared for and started the present war. In so much as William II, has been thoroughly trained in the practices and traditions of his house this was but natural and to be expected.

The first Hohenzollern with whom history has to deal was born of a family that lived in a castle of Hohenzollern in the Subanian Mountains. The name means Hohen, high; zollern, toll, and fully sets forth the very soul of the family. The first man to get the name of Hohenzollern got a patent from the consular authorities of the time to collect toll on roads running through his property. He made his roads so good that people chose to use them in preference to shorter but less well-kept roads. Then he raised the toll charges. Hence Hohenzollern, "high toll."

This passion for improvement which marked the founder of the fortunes of the family is the passion which marks the Germans of today, the passion for improvement of property and the extension of that property. The famous Berlin-to-Bagdad railroad is the lineal descendant of the Subanian turnpike built 500 years before.

The "Hustling Kids."

The Hohenzollerns date from the eleventh century. They were first counts, then burgraves. Owning an original small property, prudent marriages and purchases made their holdings very considerable. Their prudent councils made them men of mark. The first of them to count for much was Frederick, the sixth burgrave of Nuremberg. To him Emperor Sigismund gave the mark or match of Brandenburg. Then, for our purpose, the history of the Hohenzollerns begins. It was not much of a gift. Brandenburg was mostly swamp and bog, inhabited by some 200,000 wild and warlike people. It was something like giving a man the Everglades of Florida filled with Seminole Indians. Only the climate was not good, like that of Florida. Probably few people would have accepted the gift.

Frederick was a hustler. He accepted with thanks and set to work to make Brandenburg a country. He pacified the people as best he could, set them to work, drained the bog and, sticking to his trade, made roads. He did not accomplish very much, but he set the wild swamp dwellers of Brandenburg to work and to make farms of bogs and of swamps and to build roads.

And since that time the house of Hohenzollern has been making its people drain bogs, make farms and build roads. Later came great factories and railroads and steamship lines, but the Berlin-to-Bagdad railroad is merely an offshoot of the Subanian toll road.

Right there, in Brandenburg, started the paternalism of the Hohenzollerns. They were farmers, millers, road builders. The original inhabitants of the mark were little better than wild Indians, hunters, fishermen, robbers. Frederick could not see that sort of thing. So he set to telling his people just what to do. The Hohenzollerns have been telling their people what to do ever since.

For some 200 years after Conrad, his descendants kept on the work. They did not fight much, for Brandenburg was a weak province between strong provinces. But by 1400 they had Brandenburg in pretty good shape, cultivated, roads built, mills, and people all working hard.

Then came the thirty years' war, which almost exterminated the German people. Brandenburg and Prussia had nothing to do with the war. It broke out first between Sweden and Austria and was renewed from time to time by other principalities. Brandenburg was the Belgium of that war. The Austrian and Swedish armies overran the country and fought over every inch of the drained bogs and good roads that the Hohenzollerns and their people had reclaimed and built by 200 years of toll.

Brandenburg and Prussia were what Northern France will be when they get through fighting the thirty years' war. It was a ruined country. Then came the man whom Wilhelm II. has so often stated was his model—the Great Elector, Frederick William Hohenzollern, born at Nurnberg.

When the Great Elector came into office he found Brandenburg a wilderness. He could not revive the dead nor reconstruct the destroyed. So he started all over again.

The Kaiser's Model.

The states which acknowledged the rule of the Hohenzollerns were scattered through Northern Germany. There were old and new marks of Brandenburg, the dukedom of Prussia and several towns and small properties dispersed among the states of other princes. Indeed, until the time of Frederick the Great, the grandson of the Great Elector, the elector of Brandenburg had to solicit permission from other princes to cross their states when he wished to visit parts of his own territory.

The Great Elector, in so far as was possible, set his desolated people to work, refilled the farms, rebuilt the roads and cemented his scattered possessions to the best of his ability. He did a wonderful work. He found Brandenburg a waste. When he died it was a powerful state. He was the first of the Hohenzollerns to start out on the theory that Brandenburg and Prussia should not be dependent upon Austria or upon the German Empire of which Austria was the head.

He was a great man, the Great Elector, and in many wise his descendant, William II resembles the ancestor, whom he has often said, he has taken as his model. The Great Elector was brave but always disliked to fight. He was wily as a fox, haughty as a god; yet, when it suited his turn, he could cringe and fawn like a dog. He was impatient of opposition, yet bore with it. He did many cruel things, even had his own minister tortured, yet he was an affectionate husband and father and a wise, paternal ruler. Historians have been puzzled by the character of the Great Elector and have often enlarged on his faults while forgetting his virtues. It must be remembered that he found his country ruined and his people destroyed by a war that they had no part in creating. He left his country strong and his people, relatively speaking, prosperous.

Here again it is easy to see how the ancient German, so individualistic, and so free, came under the rule of the autocrat. Germany had been almost destroyed by the thirty years' war. The strong men, the leaders in battle and in Parliament had either died or been killed. Only women, children and weaker and weakened men prevailed.

The Great Elector took these war-wrecked men and women and made them strong and prosperous. It is not to be marveled therefore that the autocrat obtained a tremendous prestige among the German people. As freemen they had been destroyed. Governed by a benevolent despot they had prospered.

Some historians say that had this great historical figure not appeared when he did Germany would have disappeared from the map of Europe, that France, Sweden, then a first-class power, and Russia would possess the lands now known as Germany and also those of Austria-Hungary and Bohemia.

The Great Elector did a wonderful work outside of Brandenburg and Prussia. He was the man who gave German troops their first prestige. He built a fleet. His support placed William of Orange on the throne of England. He welcomed the Huguenots when France threw them out. To these Huguenots Germany owes her present pre-eminence in trade. Prior to the advent of these French artisans Germany had practically no craftsmanship.

The Great Elector was succeeded by his son Frederick, who tried only to emulate the kings of France in spending money. Then came Frederick Wilhelm, who became the first king of Prussia. It should be remembered that in all this hard work the German emperor, who was then king of Austria, was the big man in Germany. But Frederick Wilhelm laid the emperor under such obligations that, after much fussing, he was allowed to assume the title, not king of Prussia, but of king "in Prussia." This meant that he was not a king save when he was in Prussia.

It was quite a boost for the Hohenzollerns, who had been electors and dukes to become kings. Frederick Wilhelm made the most of it. He was the chief farmer, the chief husbandman, the great farm and factory foreman, the price and cost man of the family. He was a squire, crabbed, mean, hard-drinking, hard-working, old chap, but he kept up the good work for the family. He paid especial attention to the army, and under his hand the Prussian infantry came to be known as the best in Europe.

The Original Drillmaster.

Frederick Wilhelm was the original Prussian drillmaster. To his right-hand man, the duke of Anhalt-Dessau, is given credit for being the one to introduce modern drill into armies. Frederick Wilhelm was the first German militarist. He kept a great standing army and instituted the famous Potsdam Guards, made up of giants obtained from all parts of the world. Penurious to a degree, Frederick Wilhelm would spend untold sums for a tall man. It is recorded that he paid $325,000 for an Irishman named Corbett who was some 8 feet tall and the biggest man in the famous guards.

Frederick was so penurious that he would not clothe himself or feed his family decently, but he would spend great sums on the army. He was his own auditor and was betide any defaulter. He collected taxes with an iron hand, but he spent the money honestly. He kept the people working hard, improving farms and stock and building roads. Frederick worked like a horse himself and he insisted that all Prussia work with him. He even issued an order that the old women who kept fruit stands in Berlin should knit when they were not waiting on customers.

A Rare Husbandman.

He was a clever old rascal and improved the country greatly. When the South German states expelled their Protestant artisans Frederick Wilhelm sent after the emigrants and took them to East Prussia, which had been devastated during the thirty years' war. He issued farm loans to the impoverished emigrants and established them in trades and occupations. So from a desert he made East Prussia the richest province in his possession. Frederick Wilhelm was a man of intense passions and could be cruel to a degree. Historians say that at one time he wanted a court-martial to have his son and heir, Frederick II. (the Great), executed for desertion. He had treated the boy with such severity that the youth tried to escape to France. The court-martial managed to avoid the issue and refused to find Frederick guilty. But the young officer who befriended the prince, Lieut. Katte, was captured, and Frederick was compelled to witness the execution of his dearest friend.

He was a bitter old rascal, was Frederick Wilhelm, but he was a rare husbandman. He made his people work and cultivate the soil, build the roads, drill and practice craftsmanship. He ruled personally and with an iron hand. He told the Prussians what they should wear and how and when to wear it, what to eat and when to eat it, but he enriched his people and left them stronger than when he came to rule over them.

Cut to pieces and ground down by the Swedish and Austrian armies, the subdued Prussian peoples found comparative peace, rest and profit under the hard au-ocratic rule of the Hohenzollerns. They might tell a farmer how to breed his cow and how to milk her and when to wear her calf. All of which is too much government for free Americans. But, to a people coming out of the thirty years' war, the fact that they could drink their own milk and eat their own beef and vegetables, instead of having them consumed by foreign armies, the rule of the Hohenzollerns was like the rule of heaven.

Here again we get a glimpse of how the Hohenzollerns further secured their remarkable ascendancy over the originally wild, free, independent, individualistic German people. Frederick the Great, son of Frederick Wilhelm I., kept up the farming, reclamation, roadmaking and craftsmanship of the family. He disbanded the famous Potsdam Giants, but kept up and improved the great Prussian infantry. Prussia had become a great state, for the reason that it could furnish anywhere from 20,000 to 100,000 first-class troops to Austria, Saxony, Poland, France or any other country that needed help. Therefore all these countries courted Prussia.

It is doubtful that Frederick the Great was at all so great a man as his father, and he certainly was not at all so great a man as his great-grandfather, the Great Elector. These two laid the foundation of success for the so-called great warrior, Frederick the Great.

Frederick Admitted Mistakes.

Frederick was a great soldier, though he ran away from the Austrians in his first battle, Mollwitz, which was won by his Prussian infantry after his flight. He wrote of himself that no general ever made more mistakes than he did. He won great victories and he was not particular about his methods in war or in peace. Though the Hohenzollerns have the name of being war-like princes, Frederick the Great is really the only warrior of the house. The Great Elector was a great soldier, but he fought only when he saw he could win. But he started the system that left the men and means to Frederick the Great.

Frederick the Great's most notable work for Prussia was done when he organized the Furstenbund, a confederation of German princes opposed to Austrian preponderance in the empire. It was Frederick the Great that laid the foundation in this Furstenbund of the work that Bismarck set the crown, the subjection of Austria and the elevation of Prussia to first place among the German states.

He also abolished serfdom and corporal punishment within his domains. The great blot on his name was the partition of Poland, which took place during his reign. The Empress Catherine II. of Russia, a German princess, was the chief mover in this iniquitous act, but Frederick was a willing participant therein.

Frederick William II, one of the few weak Hohenzollerns, succeeded his uncle, Frederick the Great. This prince was given to wine, women and song, for which indeed few members of his family fell. He started the ill feeling between France and Prussia, countries which had been friends to that time, when he sent the duke of Brunswick, with 45,000 Prussians and 65,000 Austrians, to put down the French revolution and establish Louis XV. on the French throne. The French defeated and destroyed the invaders, and the bitter animosity between the countries was born.

Frederick William II. did this simply to aid a brother monarch, something that the Great Elector or Frederick William I. never would have done. Unless these princes could see advantages for Prussia in a war, that war did not take place.

Prussia fell low under his successor, Frederick William III. This prince ruled when Napoleon overran Europe and almost destroyed Prussia at Jena. These two Frederick Williams, the second and third, were the weak princes of Hohenzollern. However, Frederick William III. was not all weak. When beaten by Napoleon he took heart and helped Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Von Stein proceed to rebuild the state.

No Modern Army.

It may be said here that Scharnhorst, who founded the modern German army, was a Hanoverian. It was Scharnhorst who not only gave Germany its modern army, but also started the philosophy of war which Gneisenau, Clausewitz, Treitschke and Bernhardi brought to its present culmination. Scharnhorst trained Gneisenau, who trained Clausewitz, who trained Von Moltke, who trained Hindenburg. Von Falkenhayn and Ludendorff, the leaders of the German armies of today, Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Von Stein were the men who fooled Napoleon, who refused to let Prussia maintain more than 12,000 men under arms. By taking up as possible their sending them back to their civil occupations and taking up another 12,000, Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Von Stein managed to have 100,000 trained men to finish Napoleon in 1813 and again in 1815. Singularly enough, none of the three were Prussians. Scharnhorst was a Hanoverian, Gneisenau of Austrian descent, while Von Stein was from Nassau. Of the three, too, Von Stein was the only one of noble birth.

Frederick William III. was not all bad. He had his good points, but he was not a true "get along" Hohenzollern. He was succeeded by his son, Frederick William IV., an easy-going king. This young man was liberal and favored a limited monarchy to a greater extent than any other Hohenzollern. He helped his people along. Under him came the abortive revolution of 1848, crushed by the standing army of Prussia.

After Frederick IV. came Frederick William Louis, grandfather of William II. Bismarck and the modern German state, the history of which is so recent that it does not need even brief recapitulation here.

BIG CAMPAIGN CAN GET IN IS LAUNCHED SAME COMPANY

Fort Wayne Knights of Columbus Will Help Raise $1,000,000.

HAS ENDORSEMENT OF DIGNITARIES

Social and Moral Protection of Soldiers Is Object of Movement.

Bearing the endorsement and blessing of James Cardinal Gibbons, venerable primate of America, Rt. Rev. H. J. Alerding, bishop of the Fort Wayne diocese, and Rt. Rev. Joseph Chatrand, coadjutor bishop of Indianapolis, a big campaign to assist in raising $1,000,000 was launched in Allen county Sunday under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

The one million dollars which is to be raised in this campaign throughout the country will be expended to provide social and moral protection for the American soldiers regardless of creed.

It is the plan to establish Catholic recreation centers and to provide more Catholic chaplains for the army and navy. This will give the Catholic soldier boys an opportunity to hear mass and receive the sacraments and other consolations of the Catholic faith.

Announcement of the campaign was made in all the Catholic churches Sunday and great impetus was given to the movement when the letters from the three dignitaries of the church were read in which all endorsed the campaign as a highly commendable one.

Headquarters have been established in the Knights of Columbus hall and reports will be made there every day by the various teams. The office will be kept open night and day.

Captain T. F. Ryan, U. S. A., Makes Inducing Offer to Young Men.

STEADY STREAM OF MEN IN THE OFFICE

Captain Harry Clark of Battery B to Arrive Monday Evening.

Young men in Fort Wayne are now being given one of the best opportunities ever offered for enlisting before the draft catches them. Capt. Thomas F. Ryan, U. S. A., states that groups of young men from two to 135 will be guaranteed to be kept in the same company if they enlist within the next few days.

This is the infantry branch of the service and in order to make the offer still more attractive Captain Ryan states that it is very probable that these men will be sent to Fort Benjamin Harrison.

A steady stream of men kept pouring into the regular army recruiting station all day Monday. The majority of this number came for the purpose of enlisting. Captain Ryan was of the opinion that by nightfall he would have from forty to sixty men to send away to Fort Thomas, Ky. Eight men were sent away Sunday evening.

Captain Clark Coming. Lieut. H. C. Moriarty, of Battery B, received a telegram from Capt. Harry Clark, commanding officer of this company, that he would arrive in Fort Wayne Monday evening and that he intended to conduct an inspection of the company. This is a regular drill night and it is obligatory that every member be present.

Dr. A. C. Arnett will be in Fort Wayne until 9 o'clock Monday evening and every recruit who has not yet undergone a physical examination must report before this time tonight. It is understood that any recruit who does not make his appearance will be brought by a detachment or by the sheriff.

For Medical Corps. Edward H. Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Cook, 1010 West Wayne street, enlisted Saturday afternoon at the Fort Wayne recruiting station. He entered the medical branch of the service. He left Saturday night for Fort Thomas, Ky.

Somewhere in France. For several months relatives and friends of George Placier, who resided on West Jefferson street, did not hear a word from him. Saturday afternoon a friend received a card bearing his name and bearing the heading, "Somewhere in France."

No Furlough Granted. Kinser Blitz, who sails for France soon with the Williams college ambulance unit, was unable to secure a furlough and visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Blitz, as he had planned. His parents were to meet him at Pittsburgh.

Gets a Promotion. Word has been received that J. J. Bowersox, of 1409 Swinney avenue, has been promoted to corporal in the aviation corps at Fort Kelly, Texas. This young man enlisted last March and has shown such ability that he has been promoted and is in line for a sergeant's promotion. He has been detailed to the United States aviation post at Rantoul, Ill.

Hammond Organizes Unit. Sergeant Welch, one of the live wires of Captain Ryan's staff, has sent word to his captain stating that he has begun work of recruiting an entire company in Hammond with good prospects that his plans will be realized. He already has seventy men for this new unit and has about 200 lined up.

Wagner, Tim. J. McGrath, Morris C. Elder and C. J. Stein.

St. Andrew's. J. Herman Bueter, captain; Edmund Lantier, Joseph Schaffner, John Engle, Joseph Orth, Frank Cartaux, Cletus Meehan, Erwin Smith, Joseph Schoenke, William Smith, Benjamin Kintz, Joseph Soler, Benjamin Hoevel, Bert Eobay, David Light-hall, John Eard and Charles Huth.

Archie—(St. Patrick's). Dennis F. Gorman, captain; Frank Corbett, Joseph P. Ryan, Frank Westsels, Joseph Westsels, William Stark, Albert O'Laughlin, Frank Corbett, Bernard Minnick, P. F. Garman, W. C. Garman, and Edward Gass.

Anderson BEATING DRAFT. Anderson, Ind., July 23.—Sixty recruits have signed the muster roll of Company M, Indiana national guard, and it is expected the necessary quota of 150 men will be secured within a few days. Because of national guard units in the army and national guard since the war began only about one hundred young men will be drafted from Anderson on the first war call.

AT LAST THE SECRET OF HENRY FORD'S TRACTOR IS UNCOVERED THE GASOLINE ENGINE AGAINST THE SUBMARINE IS THE WAR ISSUE

Detroit Motor King's Jitney

Horse Is Already at Work and Is Declared a Huge Success—Will Be Turned Out by Thousands in New Factory Built for That Purpose.

(By B. E. LING.) Detroit, July 23.—Henry Ford against Krupp. Detroit against Essen. Tractor against submarine. This is the new array of forces in the world war.

The submarine is the engine of starvation; the tractor is the engine of plenty. The submarine stands for destruction; the tractor for production. It is the submarine's mission to starve the allied world into submission to Germany; it is the tractor's purpose to nourish it for victory over kaiserism.

Henry Ford has invented the tractor. He has perfected it. He is beginning to manufacture it in large quantities.

Ford's tractor will revolutionize farming. It will multiply the production of farms. It will double, triple, quadruple the yield of crops. It will stock the allied world's pantry.

"My tractor is a proved success," said Henry Ford today. "It will accomplish all I have sought for it to accomplish."

Ford, the patriot, is fighting eighteen hours a day in the fore line of the battle against autocracy. He believes victory rests with the alliance or nation that can feed its people longest. And Ford is fighting to produce the food.

This is Ford's conviction: If the allies fail to force a victory with land forces, sea navy and air navy, their last weapon is the tractor. A military stalemate means a war of starvation. And the tractor will feed democracy while kaiserism starves from the starving.

The tractor is neither as romantic as the submarine nor as picturesque as the "tank."

It is only eight feet long and four feet high, a cross between an automobile and a traction engine. It can do any farm work a horse can do, and at least six times as much. One man and a tractor can accomplish as much as six men and six horses.

The yield of a farm depends on the labor expended on it. The tractor will labor twenty-four hours a day; seven days a week; 365 days a year. It will plow, harrow, plant, cultivate, reap, furnish power for farm machinery and haul crops to market.

Other tractors now on the market will do these things and do them well. Four thousand tractors were used in the spring planting in Kansas alone.

But Ford's new tractor is to the tractor world what Ford's auto is to the automobile world. The Ford tractor's characteristics are these:

It is cheap. It is easy to operate. It burns gasoline, kerosene or alcohol.

It is simple to construct.

It can be built in vast quantities.

"Quantity production" is the keynote of Ford's plan for defeating the submarine with the tractor. The more tractors, the more food.

Ford has begun to build tractors for England at his experimental plant at Dearborn, a Detroit suburb. He is rushing enlargement of this plant to make certain delivery of 7,000 tractors to England by February—in time for next year's farming.

England gets the first because Germany is trying to starve England first. Ford is building another tractor plant at Cork, Ireland. Tractors built in Ireland are sure to reach their destinations in the British isles. And food raised in the British isles is sure to reach the mouths of the British people.

A dozen Ford tractors already are tilling English soil. These the British government has heartily approved and thankfully accepted.

I found Ford in the rush of his labors. He has almost entirely forsaken his $100,000,000 auto plant and for six months has devoted himself day and night to his tractor. The completed machine is the product of years of thought, but it has been brought to perfection in these six months.

Now fifty of them are proving their worth on Ford's 4,000-acre farm at Dearborn.

Two months ago Ford told close friends:

"At last I have the tractor to a point where it can be produced and marketed successfully. It's a winner."

The "winner" is the evolution of fifty models that have been built and tried at Dearborn in the past two years—most of them during the last six months of intensive effort.

Ford thinks of his tractor not only as a weapon in war, but a blessing in peace.

He foresees the day when the 50,000,000 farmers in the world will be equipped with tractors.

The price of each tractor, when materials reach a normal level, will be about $300.

The United States government is co-operating with Ford to obtain quantity production of the tractor as a farm necessity. The house of representatives, largely on recommendation of Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of Agriculture Houston, has appropriated $490,000 to make the River Rouge navigable. This is to provide water transportation to assist Ford in building the immense tractor plant and blast furnaces he plans.

The tractor plant and furnaces will eventually dim in magnitude the Ford auto plant, with its 37,000 employees. Detroit will defeat Essen. Ford will triumph over Krupp.

PLAN TO CONSERVE THE WOOL SUPPLY

Various Interests Meet in Chicago to Discuss Measures.

Chicago, July 23.—Plans to conserve the supply and stimulate the production of sheep and wool were discussed today at a joint meeting of the state council of national defense and packers, cloth and clothing manufacturers and other allied industries.

The meeting was called in answer to assertions that unless effort was made immediately to increase the output a wool scarcity would ensue which would hamper seriously the government in supplying the army with uniforms and blankets.

Means of overcoming shortage and combating big prices of cotton goods, hosiery and woollen materials, due to the war, also were before the semi-annual convention here of the United Mercantile Stores association. Eight hundred merchants, representing 1,800 central western stores, are expected to attend the sessions which are to last a week.

Bluffton Elevator DESTROYED BY FIRE

Flames of Incendiary Origin Cause Estimated Loss of $2,800.

(Special to The Sentinel.) Bluffton, Ind., July 23.—Fire of incendiary origin destroyed the old Davison elevator in this city early Sunday morning. The loss is estimated at $2,800. H. C. Arnold & Sons, who own the building, announce that they will rebuild at once.

The fire was discovered at 1:45 o'clock Sunday morning and was all ablaze before help arrived. In addition to the building a half carload of salt, a carload of coke, one and a half cars of coal and a large amount of fuel were destroyed by the fire.

Another attempt to destroy the building was made several weeks ago, but the attempt failed. Bluffton also had a fire last week which officials believe was also of incendiary origin. Authorities suspect the incendiary and it is likely that an arrest will be made within the next few days.

SPENDS SUNDAY HERE. Emil Koenig, of Columbia avenue, a member of the hospital corps unit of the United States army and who is now on special detail as chief clerk at the officers' reserve corps training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, visited with his parents here over Sunday.

MUST RETURN THE LIST IMMEDIATELY

Country Conscription Names Disappear From Bulletin Board in Court House.

Disappearance of the county conscription list from the bulletin board in the corridor of the Allen county court house has caused some worry on the part of the new county conscription board. The list disappeared some time between Friday night and Monday morning.

Sheriff George W. Gillie was notified of the disappearance and work of recovering the valuable list has begun. If the list is returned immediately the matter of the disappearance will be dropped, but should the list not make its appearance within a day it is likely that an arrest will follow.

It was stated Monday morning that this list can be regarded as United States property and any person who steals government property is usually severely dealt with.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED. Silas Corson, who was charged with having attempted to assault a ten-year-old girl residing on Erie street two weeks ago, was found guilty of the charge in juvenile court before Judge J. W. Eggeman Saturday afternoon. He was sentenced to serve three months at the penitentiary, but the sentence was suspended upon condition that he would leave the city and stay away as long as he lives.

WAR COMING TO AN END?

Supposedly Lost Brother of Miss Lena Buell Says He Has "Hunch."

HAD NOT HEARD FROM HIM FOR SIX MONTHS

Civilian Relief Committee of Red Cross Renders First Assistance.

"I have a hunch that the war will soon end."

These startling, acceptable and pleasurable words came to Fort Wayne directly from the western front of the great battlefields of Europe. And they passed the censor.

Words of this nature were contained in a letter received Saturday afternoon by Miss Lena Buell, 206 West Creighton avenue, from her supposedly lost brother who is fighting for the general cause with a Canadian regiment somewhere in France.

Miss Buell received a letter from her brother on February 1, 1917. Since that time she had not heard from him. The last letter received came across just before the submarine blockade was begun. Miss Buell became alarmed because she was not receiving any communications whatsoever from her brother. She received no response to her many letters.

Appeal was made to the Red Cross society of Fort Wayne and through the civilian relief committee, of which Charles R. Lane is chairman, Clayton C. Buell, Miss Buell's brother, was located. It was discovered that his number was 463,428 and that he had been transferred from one company to another. This is the first aid that this committee has rendered, but it stands ready to assist anyone who is in trouble of this nature.

Mr. Buell enlisted in a Canadian regiment a year ago last March in Vancouver.

Miss Buell received letters from him regularly until last February when the last one was received. She grew alarmed and entertained thoughts that some misfortune had befallen him.

The American land states in its letter that he is feeling well and that there is no reason for her to worry.

Every Patriotic Woman in the City Is Asked to Assist.

Another meeting was held at the Majestic theater Monday afternoon for the purpose of completing plans for "booster week" to replenish the funds of Battery B, which will be called within the next few days. Tickets will be good all week and one may attend any game.

A partial organization was completed at a meeting held Friday afternoon at the Majestic theater. Frank H. Hilgeman was elected chairman and Mrs. Elsie Dreifelbliss, secretary. Mrs. Dreifelbliss has for years been connected with various patriotic organizations of the city, being a prominent member of the Daughters of Veterans and has had a great deal of experience in campaign work. The headquarters of the organization, members of which have termed themselves "Battery B Boosters," will be at the Majestic theater and a cordial invitation is extended to all the ladies of the city to assist in the work. WRITERS OF CHICAGO KEEP A GREWSOME DAY

Whitechapel Club Observes Anniversary of Collins Cremation.

Chicago, July 23.—Surviving members of the Whitechapel club assembled at midnight on the shore of Lake Michigan, near Millers, Ind., and remained until dawn today for the purpose of commemorating the death, twenty-five years ago of Morris Allen, Collins, poet and cowboy member of the club, who killed himself that day.

The Whitechapel club, which was made up of journalists and artists and whose motto was "Laugh in the face of death," gave up its formal organization in 1894, but the members still keep a more or less close association. The ceremony this morning was held about the base of a great funeral pyre, the mortuary ceremonies being of the nature of the ancient Greeks and the American Indians.

Collins, who committed suicide in 1892, came to Chicago from the west in the late '80s. Championing the cause of the poor and oppressed, he waged a campaign against possessors of great wealth. His cause met with little encouragement and it was to bring it before the public that Collins killed himself, first requesting that his fellow members cremate his body that his sacrifice might be more effective. Today's ceremony was similar to that held twenty-five years ago.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarhal deafness, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surface of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

ANTON LANG CALLED TO GERMAN COLORS

Man Who Played "Christus" to Oberammergau Shows Country's Stress.

New York, July 23.—When Germany called Anton Lang, famous Christus of the Oberammergau Passion play, to military service she inadvertently let the cat out of the bag regarding her military condition today.

That move, according to Gertrude Atherton, famous American authoress, proves Germany is on her last legs and is going to extremes to continue fighting.

Anton Lang is a consumptive and has not been expected to live long. On account of his fame and popularity as impersonator of Christ, and his commercial value to Germany, he would be perhaps last to be ordered out.

"The obvious deduction," says Miss Atherton, "is if Germany is ordering her consumptives out, she must be pretty hard up. For all we know she may have emptied her sanatoriums on to the battlefield."

Miss Atherton visited Oberammergau in 1908, and boarded in the Lang home.

"My husband is tubercular," Frau Lang told Miss Atherton. "He may be the Christus in 1910, but he never will live until 1920. What little he makes as a potter is due to the fact that he is the Christus, and tourists buy of him."

"Others in the village told me the same thing," says Miss Atherton, "that with Anton Lang it was only a question of a few years. I have seen a few men look more frail. He is not more fitted to serve in the trenches, or in warfare at all, than a delicate woman."

PERSHING ON THE FIRING LINE—HOW AMERICA'S FIGHTING FORCE IN FRANCE WILL BE ORGANIZED

(By A MILITARY EXPERT.)
(Copyright, 1917, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

The "Pershing Zone" will soon be a fact. A "little strip of the United States" is going to extend across France from the American base on the French coast to the front line American trenches.

After a detailed investigation of the system established by the British and French, General Pershing has decided to establish a complete, American-controlled line of communications.

The business of maintaining an army at the front is like running a small nation, continually subjected to a series of earthquakes, devastating fires, floods, famine, plague and sudden death. It is a carefully planned effort to meet the unexpected.

I will undertake to describe as clearly as possible in the limited space allowed to me the method of carrying on this great business.

Base of Communications Is Next to Pershing in Importance.

General Pershing's army at the front must spend its entire time and attention on the business of fighting the enemy. But behind the army at the front is another army whose business it is to keep the army at the front in condition to fight.

And the commander of this "army behind the army"—whose name probably will never be mentioned in dispatches—is, next to General Pershing himself, the most important man on the French soil today. His modest title is "Commander of the Line of Communications."

The zone which he commands embraces a strip of territory from and including the base, to the point where contact is made with the trains of the combatant forces on the front.

This is the circulatory system of Pershing's army. Its railroad "arteries" pump forward the food, clothing, ammunition, tools and equipment needed at the front; and its "veins" of steel rail carry back to the "heart" at the base the sick and wounded, the worn out guns for refitting, the wagons that must be repaired, and the empty vehicles which must be refilled and sent pulsing forward again.

This is the circulatory system of Pershing's army. Its railroad "arteries" pump forward the food, clothing, ammunition, tools and equipment needed at the front; and its "veins" of steel rail carry back to the "heart" at the base the sick and wounded, the worn out guns for refitting, the wagons that must be repaired, and the empty vehicles which must be refilled and sent pulsing forward again.

Before a single one of Pershing's fighters landed in France, groups of staff corps men from every technical branch of the army went with Pershing ahead to make all arrangements for receiving, supplying and forwarding the troops. The result is the "Pershing Zone in France."

How does this zone work? The commander of the line of communications will organize it into three administrative units: (a) "supply, sanitary and telegraph service;" (b) "service of military railways;" (c) "service of military police."

Lines of Communication Are Divided Into Two Sections.

To administer and control the "supply, sanitary and telegraph service," the line of communications will be divided into two sections—a base section and an advance section—each with an assistant chief of staff in charge, competent to issue orders in the name of the commander.

The advance section commander establishes his headquarters at the advance depot on the rail head immediately behind the fighting troops. Here he has under him a staff representing the quartermaster, medical, engineer, ordnance and signal corps. To his depot are attached ammunition, supply, sanitary and engineer columns to connect with the corresponding divisional columns attached to the fighting troops.

The commander of the base section controls all that portion of the line of communications up to the depots, sanitary units and telegraph stations of the advance section. He will probably make his headquarters at the base on the coast, where he has a staff similar to that of the advance section.

These men are responsible to the commander of the line of communications (who in turn is responsible to the war department at home), that the reserve supplies on hand in his various depots shall be maintained between the maximum and minimum amounts fixed by General Pershing.

For instance, a division (28,334 men) must have 4,700 tons of medical stores alone as its initial supply. For every million men on the front a thousand-ton refrigerating plant must be maintained at the railhead, and storage tanks for millions of gallons of gasoline at the base.

To keep these replenished the communications commander furnishes the war department a copy of a list of the stores required, showing the maximum and minimum amounts to be kept on hand.

He prepares and enforces stringent regulations for the physical examination of sick and wounded men back from the front so that the force in the field shall not be depleted by malingering. Under his command are the Red Cross units extending from the battle line to the base.

Military Railways and Police Force Organized.

The second branch of the work of the commander of communications is the "service of military railways."

The construction, operation and maintenance of the railways within this zone he entrusts to an engineer officer member of his staff, called a "director of railways."

This officer will take over the French railways assigned to the American troops, and will assume charge of all captured railways in the American sector of the front. He will also build new railway lines when necessary.

No officer not attached to the military railways is allowed to give orders to subordinates of the "railways service," or to interfere in any way with the running of trains.

The work of reconstruction at the railhead is kept separate from operation of the line. This is the work for which nine regiments of engineers have been raised.

The third branch of the work of the commander of the line of communications is organization of military police. These consist of troops assigned by the commanding general for the purpose. Within the "American Zone" they will protect the inhabitants, enforce order, keep all roads clear, arrest all soldiers and civilian army employees absent without proper authority, keep a list and description of all civilians with the army, take over all prisoners passed back from the front and conduct them to the places where they are ordered assembled, police all railroad stations, depots and buildings, protect telegraph and telephone lines and railways from damage, and prevent spying.

This elaborate organization is designed to relieve the combatant field force as far as possible from every consideration except that of defeating the enemy. Without it, Pershing's men in the front line could not exist and fight for a single day.

REPUBLICAN HOLDS THAT STATE OIL JOB

Marion Circuit Court in Ruling Enjoins Democratic Pretender.

Indianapolis, July 23.—Marion Caldwell, a republican, was adjudged to be the legal oil inspector of the state, in a decision made public today by Judge Louis Ewbank, of the Marion circuit court. An injunction to prevent Adam H. Felker, a democrat, and men he had appointed as deputies from acting as oil inspectors was granted. An appeal to the Indiana supreme court will be taken, it is said. Caldwell was appointed by Governor Goodrich and Felker was named by State Geologist Barrett. There has been a dispute as to who should name the oil inspector since the United States district court some time ago gave the oil companies an injunction against the oil inspection department as it had been operated in the last few years, preventing collection of fees for the work.

SHIPPING BOARD MEMBER RESIGNS

White Quits and Then Is
of Mind to Stay to Aid
Friend Denman.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—John D. White, of Kansas City, has resigned as a member of the shipping board and President Wilson was said today to have accepted the resignation. Officials at the white house declared Mr. White's resignation was not connected with the difficulties that have developed between Chairman Denman, of the board, and Major General Goethals, of the emergency fleet corporation, over the government's ship building program.

Mr. White was said to have found the work exceedingly heavy and was anxious to get out on this account. He was one of Mr. Denman's supporters on the board.

Report that John A. Donald, of New York, another member of the board, has resigned, was denied at the white house.

Officials in close touch with the Denman-Goethals controversy said today it was not probably that President Wilson would summon either man to the white house to discuss the questions involved.

The president has all available information before him. He knows the two men thoroughly and is expected to settle the matter as quickly as possible on the information he already has.

Captain White, it turns out, offered his resignation to the president one week ago on the ground of ill-health and went on a vacation. When he returned the row between Chairman Denman and General Goethals had become acute and now, it is understood, he would like to remain until the situation clears. Captain White has supported Mr. Denman and Vice Chairman Brent in their opposition to General Goethals. John A. Donald and R. B. Stevens, the other two members of the board, are said to have taken sides with the general.

President Wilson probably will take a hand in the controversy within a few days and supplement his order dividing authority conferred on him by issuing instructions putting either Denman or General Goethals in supreme charge of shipbuilding. As it is each claims he is responsible. Mr. Donald denied emphatically today reports that he would resign.

The Mighty "KNUCKLE" Ball and its effective elusiveness described by Eddie Cicotte

HOW "KNUCKLE" BALL IS DELIVERED
Posed By BILL DOAK, TWIRLER FOR
ST. LOUIS
CARDINALS

BY J. B. SHERIDAN.

IT HAS been said that there are more methods of poisoning a dog than by filling his stomach with melted butter. So, too, there are more ways of keeping batters from batting in a baseball game than by throwing the ball past or through their bats. The "knuckle ball" is one of these ways.

When Eddie Cicotte—now don't say "SI-cot" nor yet "SI-cottay," but "See-Kote"—pitched Chicago against St. Louis on April 14, 1917, his name was flashed all over the United States, Canada, Alaska and the island possessions of the United States. Everywhere an American lives, in the trenches of Flanders, Africa, etc., it is known now that Cicotte pitched a no-hit game.

Great is the fame that follows the pitching of a no-hit game. Few pitchers have done it—as many as one each year, perhaps. Joseph McElroy Mann, a student at Princeton College, was the first man to pitch a no-hit game. That was against Yale, May 29, 1876. In 1876 George Washington Bradley pitched a no-hit game for St. Louis against Hartford. On July 12 the first perfect no-hit, no-man-to-first game was pitched by J. Lee Richmond, a left-hander, for Worcester, Mass., against Cleveland. This Richmond must have been some ballplayer. Batted in second place and had six assists the day he made his famous record.

Lots of them have pitched no-hit games since that time. Larry Corcoran, the famous White Stocking, pitched three no-hit games between 1880 and 1884. Jim Galvin pitched two between 1880 and 1884. The famous Cy Young pitched three no-hit games in twenty-three years, one of them a no-man-to-first affair. Young pitched his first no-hit game in 1897, his last in 1908, eleven years later. Addie Joss pitched two no-hit games, one of them a no-man-to-first soiree. Mountjoy of Cincinnati pitched a hitless game against Toledo in 1883. Brettenstein of St. Louis pitched his first no-hit game in 1891, his second seven years later. Atkinson, Terry, Kilroy, Weyhing, Seward and other old-timers all got in their no-hit games. Eddison and Devlin pitched no-hit games in 1876. But the honor of having pitched the greatest number of no-hit games goes to Jimmie Galvin, a St. Louis boy, who began in 1876 with the St. Louis Reds and wound up twenty years later with Pittsburgh.

Galvin was a great pitcher. He pitched two no-hit games within six weeks. On July 4, 1876, he held Philadelphia hitless, and on August 17, repeated against the Cass club of Detroit. The same J. Lee Richmond pitched two no-hit games within sixty days for Worcester against Chicago and Springfield in 1879. Kimber (Brooklyn, 1884), McIntyre (Brooklyn, 1894), King (Chicago, 1890) and Wiltsie (New York, 1908) all pitched ten innings without a safe hit being made off them. King lost his no-hit ten-inning game.

One No-Hit Game a Year.

Harry Wernwood, a minor leaguer, went seven hitless innings for Fall River in 1910. Toney, now with Cincinnati, then with Winchester, Ky., went seventeen innings, struck out nineteen batters, yet lost, 1-0, May 10, 1909. Wolfgang, now with the Chicago Americans, went ten innings of a no-hit, no-man-to-first game. Justus of Lancaster, Ohio, 1910, pitched four no-hit games in one season, but these were in a small minor league. No-hit games average one a year. All told, Jim Galvin has the best record of no-hit games. He pitched four of them in major league company—two in 1876, one in 1880 and one in 1881. Galvin was a short, stout fellow, a native of St. Louis, and without doubt a very great pitcher.

Ball Is a Hobo

THE "knuckle" ball is the hobo of ball-dom, its course, even when under "control," being entirely beyond the influence of the pitcher, so far as the "break" at the plate is concerned.

Without the spiral motion that causes a curve ball to do the will of the pitcher, the knuckle ball, floating up to the plate, gathers a pad of air in front of it and then veers, no one in advance knows whither.

It is a hobo!

When it is understood that the fast and curve balls are governed by very rapid rotation, it will also be understood that the "knuckle ball," coming absolutely without any rotation whatever, surprises, and, to some extent, puzzles the batter. Instead of a whizzing, spinning sphere which looks about the size of a pea, a great, big globular affair comes up, grinning like a full moon. It seems to be easy to hit. The fact is that it catches the batter off balance. He is expecting a fast one or a curve, and is "set" for that sort of ball. Here comes a lazy, loafing, soft-looking ball, seemingly as big as a football.

The ballistics of it is that just as it reaches the point where it makes good hitting, the ball takes an entirely inexplicable "shoot" and drops, it seems, into the ground.

This disappearance of the "knuckle ball" is easily explained. The science of ballistics teaches us that air packs up in front of any projected missile and forms a cushion. The density of the air just in front of a rifle bullet, or a baseball, or football, or even balloon, is greater than the density of the air on either side of said moving projectile.

To pierce this air cushion, the rifle bullet is given a rotary motion. That is what riding is for. The bullet bores into the cushion of air as an auger bores into soft wood. If the bullet did not have this rotary or boring motion the cushion of air in front of it would divert it from its mark and make its final destination uncertain. That is why a smooth-bore musket is inaccurate in bullet delivery.

The cushion of air in front of the bullet that does not rotate diverts the missile and makes aim uncertain. The rifling of the piece gives the bullet the rotary motion essential to accuracy.

The Ball and the Air.

So it is with pitched balls. The rotary motion given them by the pitcher controls their motion. The fast ball will shoot in or up for the reason that the pitcher imparts a side or upward rotation to the sphere. The curve ball will break out or down because the pitcher gives it a rotary motion that acts when the air cushion becomes so dense that it affects the forward movement of the missile.

But the floating, nonrotating "knuckle ball" has no rotary movement to take it past the air cushion in any designed direction. It packs up an air cushion in front of it. When the air cushion becomes so dense as to impede its progression in a direct line forward, the "knuckle ball" does one of three things.

It takes a shoot either straight ahead, to the right or to the left and downward. Not even the pitcher can foretell in what direction the ball is liable to break. It is very difficult to obtain control of this ball, just as it is extremely difficult to hit any object with a smooth-bore musket. Difficulty of control is the reason why so few pitchers successfully use the "knuckle ball."

The fact that the "knuckle ball" is liable to break any one of three ways makes it extremely difficult to hit. In the first place, the batter is surprised to see the great, big, white globe of butter floating up smiling at him. He is expecting a ball of different pace and a ball that is rotating rapidly. The unexpected pace throws his stroke out of time. He may recover his balance and hit. Just as his bat is about to meet the ball the latter drops, it seems, into the earth.

The spitball always breaks one way—down. There have been pitchers who could, it is said, break the spitball three ways—in, out or down. These have been very few. Mathewson's famous "fadeaway" broke outside and away from the batter. There is but one speed to the spitball and one to the "fadeaway." You cannot vary pace on them. You can throw the "knuckle ball" in as many various speeds as you can control. Cicotte says that he can change the pace on the "knuckle ball" at will, but that he never can tell just what direction it will take after it breaks.

Varies the Pace of Ball.

"I use it very frequently during a game," said the latest no-hit pitcher after his great game at St. Louis on April 14. "I vary pace on it, and very frequently I do not ask it to break at all. I throw it with some rotation. When I know a batter is going to hit—when I know and he knows that I must lay a strike over the plate—I pitch the "knuckle ball" with as little rotation as possible, so that it may break as well as possible. The different paces deceive the batter, and the break simply makes it impossible to hit safely save by the greatest fluke.

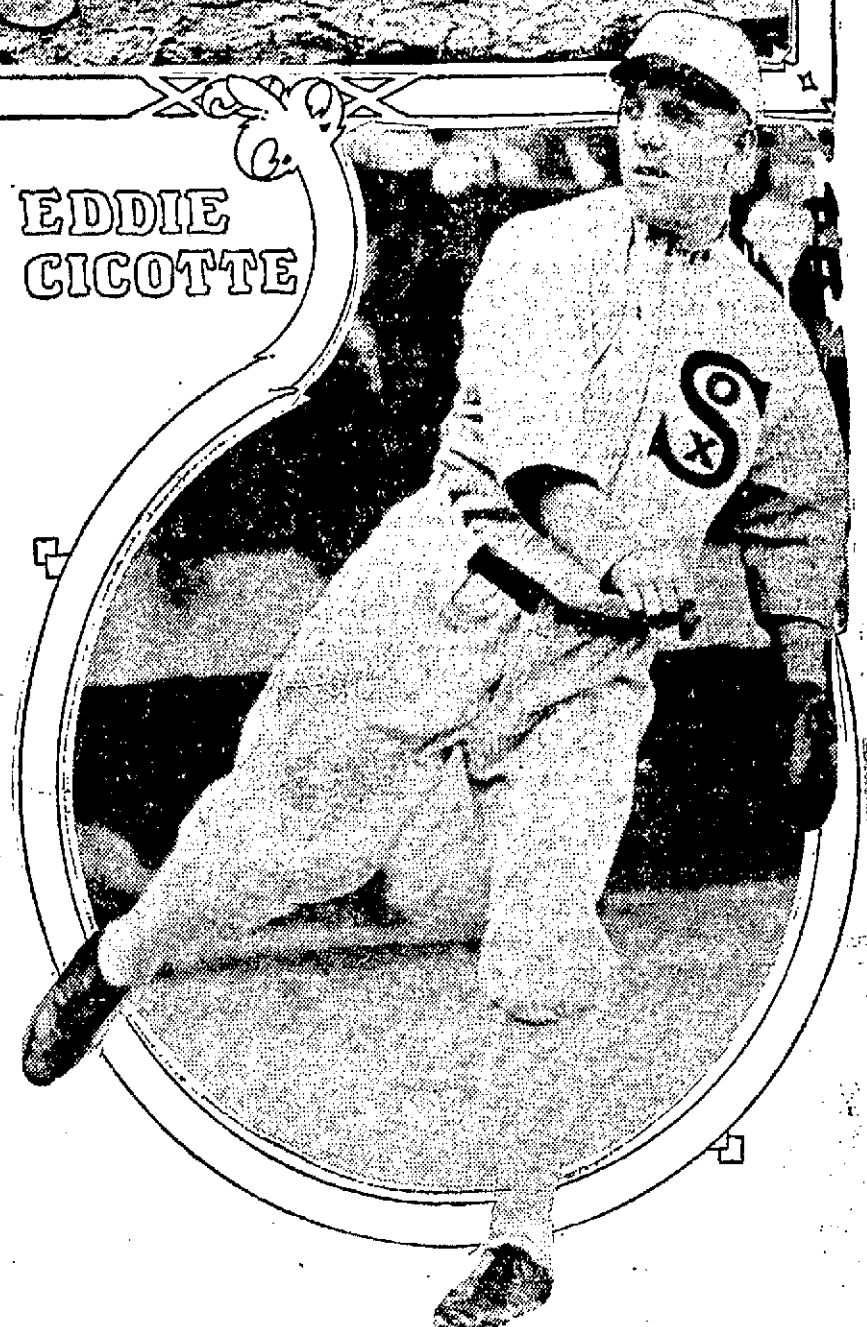

"The spitball has but one pace—fast. The "fadeaway" had but one pace—medium slow. I can pitch the "knuckle ball" at any pace from medium fast to dead slow.

"I began using this ball when I was a kid. It was always impossible to hit, but I found it very hard to obtain control of it. It was not until I joined Boston in 1908 that I began to get control of the "knuckle ball." Even then it evaded me for months at a time. When I got it going right I was hard to beat. Even now I often lose control of it.

"I joined Chicago in 1912, and began to do better with the difficult delivery. I had trouble, however, with my general control. I had been a slim kid, but I was growing fat. I weighed 135 pounds when I had my first engagement with the St. Louis Cardinals, way back in 1903. I weighed 150 pounds in 1913. Since that time I have tried to keep down to 170 pounds, but I find it hard to do so.

"This year I made a special effort to reduce my weight. I am down to 170 pounds, lighter than I have been in ten seasons. I find that my control is better than it has ever been. To this

EDDIE CICOTTE

I attribute my early success this season. You see, when I am fat I can't get my arm to follow through with my pitch. My upper arm hits my right breast and won't go any farther. Thus I have been pitching with a short, jerky motion, which is not good for control.

Cicotte is a native and resident of Detroit. He got his first engagement to his native state, at St. Louis, Mo. After one season there the Detroit club signed him. The then manager, a clever chap named William Armour, thought Cicotte was too light to succeed in the major leagues. He sent him to Augusta, Ga.

"Armour and Detroit could not see me as a pitcher," said Cicotte, "but I did my home town a good turn when I sent me to Augusta. On the same team with me was a green young outfielder. He was wild and would make any number of mistakes and 'bone' plays, but he could hit the ball a mile now and then, he was fast, and he was burning with ambition.

"I recommended this young man to Detroit. They accepted my recommendation and signed him. He is still with them. His name is Cobb."

Sold to Lincoln.

If Detroit appreciated what Cicotte had done for it in recommending Cobb it did not show its appreciation by retaining the little pitcher. He was sent to Indianapolis. He did not stick in that company, but retrograded to Des Moines in a lower class league. He did well there. Detroit recalled him again in 1907, but could not see him as a pitcher. They sold him outright to Lincoln, in the Western League. Cicotte had another good year and Boston took a chance on him in 1908. He stuck after five years' trying.

Weight began to worry Cicotte now. He did well in 1908 and 1909, but not so well in 1910. In 1911 he had a bad year because his wife was very ill during the summer. So Boston released him to Chicago for the small sum of $1800, waiver price.

Cicotte did good work for Chicago. He has been the club's leading pitcher for several years. He cannot be worked very often, but when he does pitch, his team and the spectators know that the club that beats him will have to play ball.

Like Lajoie, Dubuc, Rondeau, Fabrique, etc.,

Cicotte is a French Basque. The Basque provinces of France and Spain are peopled by an ancient race, derived genealogists do not know exactly whence. They were in France and Spain before the Celts, who were in Europe before the Teutonic races. Thus the Basques have been in Europe longer than any other people. They have a language which differs from French and Spanish, and the people themselves are radically different from their French and Spanish countrymen.

As far as can be seen, the Basques are the original ballplayers of the world. The greatest of ancient ball games is known to the Basques by the Spanish name, "pelota" or "ball." It is known as "jai alai" in America, and is played in great courts all over Spanish-America. The Ice Palace in St. Louis was originally built for a pelota court during the world's fair of 1904. The ball used is harder and faster than a baseball, is about the size of a pool ball and is thrown against a rock wall by players who use curved baskets attached to the left hand for the purpose. Pelota is a wonderfully interesting game, and calls for the highest type of trained athlete. Only Basques play pelota. They are an extremely vital people, and, though numbering less than 2,000,000, produce notable men. Generals Joffre and Foch, heroes of the great world war, are of Basque extraction and birth.

The Basques are a very independent, liberty-loving people. When Don Carlos was fighting to become king of Spain, he solicited the aid of the Basques. It was granted him on condition that while he might call himself king of the other provinces of Spain, he must be content to be known as president and plain Don or "Mister" in the Basque provinces. The French Basques always refused to acknowledge the sovereignty of Napoleon I., or of any other French sovereign or government of which they did not approve.

Cicotte keeps busy in winter. He has a garage in Detroit, which takes a lot of his time. He hunts and fishes whenever he can find leisure. A wife and two daughters represent his family. He is 34 years old and seems to have many years of pitching left in his right arm.

WILL HAVE COMPANY AT SISTER'S FUNERAL

Officer Will Accompany Man Who May Not Have Registered.

Commodore Keck, who formerly lived in Cedarville, made a mistake when he rode a Wabash freight train into Fort Wayne Monday morning to attend his sister's funeral. He was told by Wabash Detective Buick, when a razor was found on him Keck was taken to jail.

Keck told Judge Kerr that he is 27 years old, and has lost his registration card. The judge does not like the story. He ordered Keck held under $100 bond until Tuesday.

"But I must attend my sister's funeral," insisted Keck.

"We will arrange that," assured Judge Kerr.

The funeral of the sister, Margaret Leininger, 2538 North Clinton street, will be held at the Klebahn & Melving chapel at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. One of the county deputies will accompany Keck to the funeral and after the burial will return the man to jail.

Keck is now under bond because of an attack made on members of his family at Cedarville a week ago. He threw all his near relatives out of his home and then walked to Fort Wayne, where he was arrested on an assault charge. Keck is that of train climbing, but Judge Kerr thinks that the man has also failed to register.

REPORT SHOWS GOOD WORK OF RED CROSS

Shipping Station Opens for Northern Indiana Chap- ters Today.

One of the busiest weeks of the Red Cross chapter was experienced up to Saturday night, as shown by the report of the chairman of the various departments in surgical supplies and hospital garments.

Sixty-four enrollments were recorded Saturday afternoon at the headquarters. Fifty of them coming from the new auxiliary formed at Monroe, and eleven from Mopore. Several donations were also reported, $25 coming from the Howard Council, Royal Arcanum. Mrs. Marlon Phares, of Winchester road, route No. 9, gave ninety cents which she obtained from the sale of flowers. Two little girls from Lakeside brought in to the headquarters $1.85, which represented the receipts from a juvenile circus given Thursday afternoon.

Children at the Guildin, Lakeside and Smart playgrounds are being instructed in the art of knitting, and are putting in some of the time spent at the recreation places helping the Red Cross.

The shipping station for the 120 Northern Indiana chapters which will come under the jurisdiction of the Fort Wayne chapter, opened Monday, although supplies will probably not start coming in for a few days. The room has been completely overhauled, with shelves and tables placed around in convenient places.

GEAKE QUILTS DRAFT BOARD

William Geake declares that his only reason for resigning from his place on the draft board is because of the serious illness of his 7-year-old son. The boy is now being treated at a resort in the Adirondack mountains. The father has received word that the condition of the lad is critical and he may be called to the bedside at any time.

"This exemption board task is one which should hold the constant attention of the board members until the draft armies have been completed," Mr. Geake said Monday.

"I do not want to start the work and be forced to break it off later. It is better to get another man before the work begins."

Mr. Geake declares that his action is not moved by any dislike of the painful duties which will fall to the lot of the exemption boards.

Mayor Hoesy states that he has no idea who will be the new member appointed on the second section board. Gustav Berger is secretary and Dr. L. P. Drayer is the physician making up the remainder of the board.

No More to Quit.

Mr. Geake, who is one of the first men in the country to resign from a draft board after the lottery has been drawn, will be the only member of Fort Wayne boards to quit from the task about to start.

"I am going to stay with the work as a matter of patriotism. If I loose all of my medical practice," said a physician on one of the three boards Monday. Other members of the three boards, when called by telephone, said that they had no intentions of getting out from under the responsibility about to be theirs.

"I am sure the action of William Geake casts no reflection upon him," said Mayor W. J. Hoesy, Monday. "His record as a citizen is too plain for such an insinuation to be well founded."

"The place must be filled at once," Mayor Hoesy went on. "This work of caring for the situation at hand must not be halted at this time."

Nothing Definite.

No definite information regarding the time when they shall begin their work and the date of notifying the draft subjects has yet been received by the draft board members.

Keaps of literature relating to the mode of examination and the grounds and processes for exemption were unloaded at the city clerk's office, Monday.

First questions to be answered in writing by conscripts will be regarding their physical condition. The questions which will immediately precede the physical test are:

Have you found your health and habits in any way interfere with your success in civil life? If so, give details.

Do you consider that you are now

sound and well? If not, state details: Have you ever been under treatment in a hospital or asylum? If so, for what ailment?

The three questions are to be sworn to and appear above the signature of the young man being examined.

Then comes the physical trial. Nose, throat, teeth, eyes and ears will be important parts of the examination.

When the test has been passed the appeals for exemption may be given. A booklet containing forms for preparing affidavits to support claims from army service has been presented to the board and will be given those who appear to escape the army draft.

A bundle of blank forms to be filled in when appeals are taken from the decision of the local boards are also at hand. Work will be ready to start here as soon as instructions to proceed are received.

Many Queries.

Mayor Hoesy and the office of the city clerk received dozens of letters, Monday, in regard to the drawing of the draft numbers. Many young men in distant cities are anxious to know their conscription numbers. Some young men wish to know if they must come back to Fort Wayne for examination when their number is called. It is the present opinion that reports for examination must be made at the place where registration was conducted.

CHAUTAUQUA ENDS TUESDAY

The band will also give a concert in the afternoon.

Although Fort Wayne's first chautauqua, it will not be its last. In every way it has been a success. The Redpath bureau has furnished splendid programs more than gratified. A goodly sum, after all expenses have been met, will be realized.

The program this afternoon was featured by an address by George L. McNutt, of New York city, on "How to Meet the High Cost of Living." Mr. McNutt is a food expert of international reputation.

Lieut. Bowman Tonight.

Lieutenant Robert Bowman, hero of Verdun, who spent eighteen months in the European conflict and served with the allies as a soldier in the first line trenches and as a member of the field service of the ambulance corps in France, will speak tonight, following a Mother Goose festival in charge of Miss Katherine Stiles, the children's worker.

On account of her congressional duties, Miss Jeannette Rankin, congresswoman, who is on the program for tonight, is unable to fill her chautauqua engagements.

Lieutenant Bowman's lecture is illustrated with views he has taken on the battlefields. He took a prominent part in both the Somme and Alsace offensive for nine months and later distinguished himself at Verdun. Because of valorous deeds he was honored with the Croix de Guerre, the Cross of War and the golden star, the highest decoration given up to that time to any foreign non-combatant.

Lieutenant Bowman is an American and returned to this country when diplomatic relations were severed with Germany. He arrived in Fort Wayne Sunday for his engagement here tonight.

Seen Shady Brook Park? CHAOS IN THE RUSSIAN ARMY

Let it act without mercy. Let it find enough courage to strike those who by their cowardice are destroying Russia and the revolution."

Referring to the threatened disaster, the telegram says: "Most military units are in a state of complete disorganization. Their spirit for the offensive has utterly disappeared. They no longer listen to orders of their leaders and they neglect all exhortations of comrades, even replying by threats and shots. Some elements voluntarily evacuate positions without even waiting for the approach of the enemy."

Refuse to Give Relief.

"Cases are on record in which an order given to proceed with all haste to such and such a spot to assist comrades in distress has been discussed for several hours at meetings and reinforcements consequently have been delayed several hours."

"These troops abandon their positions at the first shots of the enemy. For a distance of several hundred yards long files of deserters armed and unarmed, men in good health and robust, who have lost all shame and feel they can act altogether with impunity are proceeding to the rear. Frequently entire units desert in this manner."

RUSSIANS GAIN IN DRIVE.

Petrograd, July 23.—The Russians attacked the Germans near Krovo and Vilna, north of the Pinsk marshes, and penetrated the Teuton lines for a distance of two miles, according to an official announcement made here today. The Russians captured more than 1,000 Germans but the development of success, the statement adds are being jeopardized by the moral weakness and instability of certain Russian detachments.

Between the river Sereth Stripa and Zlota Lipa the Russian statement says the Austro-Hungarians continued their offensive, occupying villages. The chief of the Russian divisional staff was killed while re-establishing order among the units on the east Galician front.

Kerensky, concededly the strongest man to be found for the task, is willing to grapple with all his widely recognized force and ability.

The war situation for the moment demands consideration chiefly at two points where the Germans have concentrated their main military efforts—the yielding position of the Russian front in eastern Galicia and the section of the French front near Craonne. In the former war theatre there is little sign as yet of a change in the temper of the disaffected Russian troops sufficient to bring about an effective resistance to the Teutonic progress, which threatens disaster to the Russian arms.

On the western front there is a different story to tell. The desperate onslaughts of the crown prince's forces are being met with gallant resistance by General Petain's troops and such small bits of territory as have been gained by the Germans have been dearly paid for.

Last night the German assaults were renewed on the Calais and Casemates plateaus are being put forth. Some headway was made on both these elevations. But General Petain's men are clinging bravely to their both, although driven out of first line trenches. The Germans attacked the support trench on the Calais plateau but it was retained by the French in its entirety.

Today's official reports from the Galician front are little, if any, more encouraging than those of the last few days. While efforts are being made to restore order among the Russian forces, the Austro-German offensive between the Stripa and the Zlota Lipa is being pushed and additional villages have been occupied by the Teutons. Toward the northern end of the Russian front the situation is different. The Russians have taken the offensive and opened up a gap two miles deep in an important sector of the German line near Krovo and Vilna, incidentally capturing more than 1,000 Germans. Here, too, however, certain detachments appear to have been worked upon by the extremists and are fighting so indifferently as to jeopardize the development of the Russian success.

will then be appended to the registration list of that district and then immediately affected by the selection drawing of last Friday, just as though they had been included in the list at that time.

Prepare for Queries.

Officials of Provost Marshal General Crowder's office were preparing today for the great number of inquiries and requests for rulings which they expect from the local boards as soon as examinations of the men for their several days for the boards to become thoroughly familiar with their work. After that officials expect the examinations and exemptions of men or their certification to the higher boards for military duty will proceed rapidly. Within a week after the local board begin operations the district board also will be able to begin their work and take up questions of industrial exemptions as rapidly as they arise.

He said that America had decreed that she would not permit exports to neutrals as long as these neutrals exported to Germany. Consequently, Herr Erzberger said Germany would very shortly lose its source of support. The terrible fate, he said, had to be faced that the military authorities had entirely figured out these supplies and that nobody in authority could find an answer or give an idea from where these supplies were to come.

GERMANS ATTACK FRENCH.

Paris, July 23.—Continuing their violent attacks on the Alsace front the Germans last night stormed French trenches on the Casemates plateau, the war office announced. On the Calais plateau the French maintained their supporting trenches.

DUTCH COMMISSIONERS COMING.

Amsterdam, July 23.—The minister of agriculture and commerce has appointed a commission of three to proceed to America to represent Dutch interests in connection with American exports. The commissioners are Engineer Van Elbe, Honven Vandoort, ex-vice president of the East Indian council, and Van Vollenhoven, director of the Netherlands bank.

PRESIDENT TO TAKE A HAND

board of three, as voted by the senate. The president may take a hand in some of the other conflicting sections.

President Wilson is understood to prefer the senate prohibition section forbidding manufacture of distilled liquors, but allowing the manufacture of beer and wine. The house put in a "bone dry" section. The president has heretofore opposed a congressional commission to investigate the conduct of the war, and there is no reason to believe he will favor such an amendment to the bill.

BILL BACK TO HOUSE.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—The administration's food control bill passed by the senate Sunday after more than five weeks of bitter contest was back today in the hands of the house.

The house was expected to disagree to the senate amendments and the bill was sent to conference probably, where differences between the two houses will be threshed out.

Leaders were hopeful today that the measure would be sent to the president for his signature by the end of the week. The senate prohibition sections prohibiting manufacture of distilled spirits in bond was substituted for the house "bone dry" provision and will be one of the difficulties to be overcome in conference.

Another was the senate amendment for a board of food administration of three members instead of a single member as provided in the house bill.

RECOVER ATHLETE'S BODY.

Lafayette, Ind., July 23.—The body of Earl J. (Billy) Williamson, the Purdue university basketball star who was drowned in the Wabash river yesterday afternoon, was recovered by a searching party at 11 o'clock this morning. He survived by his parents, three brothers and four sisters.

HOT WEATHER WAVE STRIKES CITY HALL

No Big Business Will Be Tackled by Boards

Monday.

Every day was off in the city hall offices, Monday.

"Doing no more than we have to today. When?" said one official as he waved a paper fan. Clerks mopped their foreheads as they went about their tasks of balancing the office ledgers.

No stirring business is slated for the board of works meeting, Monday afternoon. Only the matter of the budget for next year will be passed upon by the park board. The amount to be asked for, $34,000, for park use, has been decided upon already. The board members expect to hand in a bill for $2,000 for salary of Carl Getz, city forester, who will resign unless given that amount.

ple's palace. Two soldiers were wounded at the first shots from the revolvers of the assassins. The guard of 150 soldiers rushed from the building and fired on the three men who attempted to escape but were lynched by the crowd. Fifteen civilians were wounded in the firing, some seriously.

STUDENTS QUELL MUTINEERS.

Petrograd, July 23.—A dispatch to the Bourgeois Gazette from Nijni Novgorod, relates that on July 17, a regiment of troops ordered disbanded for insubordination mutinied, took possession of the town and were still in control July 20. Cadets sent from Moscow to subdue them battled with revolvers, resulting in casualties on both sides and the surrender of the mutineers, who at last accounts were held prisoners. A parley with the commander of the Moscow garrison after order had been restored, resulted in an agreement to surrender control.

ADMIRAL ARRESTED.

Petrograd, July 23.—The newspapers announced that Rear Admiral Verdevinski, commander of the Baltic fleet, had been arrested for communicating a secret government telegram to sailors' committees.

DISARMING WORKMEN.

Petrograd, July 23.—The disarming of workmen, including the so-called "red guards," is proceeding systematically in the Vassily island and Viborg quarters. More than 1,200 rifles and revolvers, and some machine guns have been recovered. The majority of revolvers were obtained at the fortress of St. Peter and Paul, where cases just arrived from America had been broken open. According to the Russian Volky about a third of the arms stolen since the outbreak have been accounted for. Several carts with shells were stopped on the banks of the Neva. The military authorities knew nothing about them and the carts taken to the station.

PETROGRAD UPRISING ENDED.

London, July 23.—Dispatches received by the Russian embassy here state that the rising in Petrograd may be considered as definitely suppressed. The regiments which participated in the disturbances are being disarmed and disbanded, these advisers report, and the city is being patrolled by troops.

Isolated shooting from windows has occurred, but order is being energetically restored and all suspects arrested. It is added, while drastic measures are being taken to prevent any further insubordination of criminal agitation.

EXAM FOR ROOKY OFFICERS.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., July 23.—Three hundred men at the reserve officers' training camp here from Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin today presented themselves for medical examinations for provisional second lieutenantcies in the regular army. Those who pass the medical examination will go before an examining board for inquiry as to their general qualifications for commissions.

EXPLODING TIRE FATAL.

Elwood, Ind., July 23.—Mrs. Martin Shores, 52, was injured fatally six miles south of here today while on her way to Indianapolis in an automobile driven by her son. A tire exploded, causing the machine to skid and turn over. Miss Inez Shores was injured seriously. Other occupants of the car received minor injuries only.

THE MARKETS

RUSSIAN SITUATION AFFECTS THE MARKET

Wall Street Trading Is In- fluenced by the News From Petrograd.

New York, July 23.—Events over the week end, particularly latest developments in Russia, were unfavorably interpreted by traders at the opening of today's market. War stocks reflected moderate pressure declines in industrial and equipment extending from 1 to 2 points. Coppers and Motors showed a renewal of last week's heaviness and rails were irregular. Dealings were light and restricted to the more speculative groups.

The irregular drift of the opening continued throughout the early session. Motors and war shares made little headway. The easing of money rates call loans renewing at 3 per cent was among the few encouraging developments of the forenoon. Bonds were steady on nominal dealings, Liberty 3½, selling at 99:40 to 99:49.

SHORT RESERVES OF CORN HARDEN VALUE

That Cereal and Wheat Are Marked for Advances in the Pits.

Chicago, July 23.—Corn showed a tendency to harden in value today owing largely to the scantiness of reserve stocks and to continued urgent demand for supplies available for immediate use. Opening prices which ranged from the same as Saturday's finish to 1½¢ higher, with September at $1.63 to $1.63½, and December at $1.61½ to $1.61½, were followed by something of a setback but then by a fresh moderate upturn.

The close was nervous, ¾ to 1½¢ net higher at $1.63½ September, and $1.63½ to $1.17 for December.

New advances in the price of wheat resulted from the senate vote favorably to a minimum quotation of $2 at primary centers and from the bullish crop outlook in North Dakota and Canada. After opening 1c to 1½¢ higher at $2.55 for July and $2.29 September, the market scored further gains.

The close was unsettled, ¾ to 4c net higher, with July at $2.59 and September at $2.31½.

Heavy rains that interfered with harvesting carried the oats market up grade. Higher quotations on hogs lifted provisions.

MANY DIVORCES ARE GRANTED AT AUBURNThree Decrees Are Granted in the DeKalb Circuit Court.

(Special to The Sentinel.)
Auburn, Ind., July 23.—Severing of the marriage ties seemed to occupy the greater part of the time of the DeKalb circuit court Friday and Saturday and three couples settled their marital troubles at this time. Mrs. Loretta Funk Kiger who was asking for a divorce from her husband on the grounds of non-support, was granted the same and was restored to her maiden name, Loretta Funk. The defendant did not put in an appearance. The couple had been married five years.

James A. Shull, of near Auburn, was granted a divorce from his wife, Sadie Shull, and given the custody of their three children aged 15, 14 and 6 years. Mr. Shull claimed cruel and inhuman treatment and charged his wife with neglecting her home and children. Mrs. Shull did not appear and was represented by Prosecutor James R. Nye.

Mrs. Myrtle Ginder was granted a divorce from her better half, Jacob Ginder, a farmer of Wilmington township, on grounds of non-support. The couple were married in 1900 and lived together until 1910. They have two daughters, aged 16 and 14. The plaintiff was granted a divorce and the custody of the children.

Auburn Short Items.
Mrs. C. O. Osborn, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Frank Cook, of West Ninth street, for some time, died at the latter's home Friday night, death being due to cancer. The body was taken to Bluffton, Sunday, for funeral and burial. Besides Mrs. Cook, she leaves one daughter and three sons.

Miss Joyce Kanauer of Pioneer, O., who is visiting Miss Edna Shugars, was the guest of honor at a party given at the Shugars home Friday afternoon when a company of thirty young ladies were entertained. Miss Kanauer is employed in the Ashland college, teaching expression and physical culture. She returned to her home today.

Sheriff Baltz was called upon Saturday when a suspicious acting stranger who had been hanging around the interurban station for several hours, aroused the suspicions of travelers and they called the official who asked the man to move on. The man claimed to be a lecturer. He purchased a ticket Friday afternoon for Waterloo, but continued to hang around the station until Saturday afternoon, and made himself a nuisance by the many questions he continued to ask. He carried a large heavy suitcase and a winter overcoat.

A DAY WITH WAR TANKS

British Monsters Given a Deal of Attention by Their Keepers.

HUGE AND AWKWARD, BUT ARE TERRIBLE

Only Small, Lithe, Strong Men Fit to Serve in a Tank's Belly.

British Headquarters in France, June 31.—(By Mail.)—Under the shelter of a green ride, about fifteen miles behind the present front line trenches, one may come upon the encampment of the tanks. The parade ground is like a distorted play from Gulliver-Lilliputian men at play with Brobdingnagian toys.

A dozen of the monsters are lying stretched out in the warm afternoon sun, being combed and oiled and scoured by their industrious attendants who are like mere minding pygmies beside their great steeds. Over at the edge of the parade where the level ground breaks up into ridges and hillocks, two or three of the big iron monsters are seen in pairs.

Grunting and puffing, creaking and complaining they move along not with the easy stride of the story-book giants, but with the cumbersome gait of a huge muscle-bound turtle, house on back. But nothing discomposes them in their grumbling advance. They mount a terrace five feet high with the same clumsy complaining nonchalance that they negotiate a mole hill and the steady pace of their caterpillars is unchanged with their climbing up a steep slope or clattering along the level.

Tank Man Has No Snap.

The job of a tank man is no sinecure. The interior is not built for comfort. It is crowded with machinery and guns and armor and in motion the deck sways and bucks like that of a little torpedo boat in a storm. Nor is the roof high enough to prevent danger of receiving a sound thumping if one is too tall. Men for tanks are picked for must be stout and slender bulk. They must be tough as nails but occupy no unnecessary space. A fat man would stick in the manhole which is alike entrance and exit. A tall man would have to spend his time in a half erect position which would interfere not only with his own efficiency but with that of everybody else on board. If you would spend a few minutes on board a tank you must have your steel helmet with you and your gas mask carefully encased in its waterproof bag, ready for emergency.

Climbing through the great manhole requires a little knack of its own. Legs first is the approved technique, although to the novice there appear grounds for the reverse process may be just as satisfactory.

Legs first, one is in danger of placing a foot or a leather clad ankle against a hot engine case, with disastrous results, but with care this can be avoided.

Spick, Shining and Plain.

Everything is spick and span shining with abundance of oil, but no superfluous luxuries of brass or nickel take away the business-like bareness and griminess of gray black armor plate which obtrudes everywhere. As in a battleship, the preferential position from the point of view of safety, is given to the engines. They lie just above the floor, stretching in a longitudinal position to the center of the craft, while shafts and cranks run under, a special armor casing, at the back of the tanks which operate the caterpillars and the big push wheels at the rear.

The painting of the tanks is a great pastime in the tank encampment. Modern protective coloring of battlefields weapons offers a wide field for the development of the cubist art and the decorative appearance of a tank going into battle suggests that some painter who all his life had specialized in barber poles had, suddenly gone amuck with paint and brush.

These Electric Fans Will Blow Themselves Away at $4.49

Remember last summer—the frightfully hot July and August days, when there wasn't an electric fan to be had for love or money?

Fan manufacturers made up their minds that in 1917 there should be no dearth of fans and forthwith turned out enough to cool the whole hemisphere.

But the perverseness of the weather took another turn and sent us a cool June, a still cooler July—and the fan men were distraught and overloaded with a supply of electric fans!

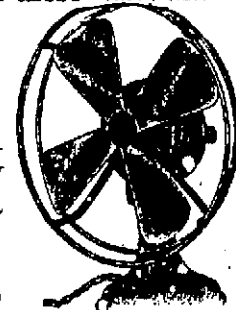

To come to the point, a manufacturer made us an offer of these fans, and by purchasing a large quantity, we offer them at

$4.49 EACH

Guaranteed for Two Years.

They're just like cut-five-inch blade size to be used on direct or alternating current; the cost of operation being very small. They can be carried from one room to another—a constant companion on hot days and nights.

SPEED MANIA BRINGS DISASTER FOR YOUTH

Sack Cloth Is His Garb for a Time While in the City Jail.

Albert Crowel, 17, repented his misdeeds in sackcloth and in a dark cell of the city jail when his sins had found him out Sunday morning. He was arrested because he forged a check to buy a motorcycle. He was disrobed because the clothes he wore belonged to John Lober. Crowel was given a gunnysack for raiment until his relatives brought him clothes. Crowel's cell garment was made by cutting holes in the bottom of the sack for his legs and tying the top of the sack about his neck.

The lad was bound over to the circuit court under $500 bond Monday morning on the forgery charge. If he is sent to Jeffersonville he will be one of the youngest inmates in the prison. He pleaded guilty to the forgery complaint when arraigned in police court Monday.

Crowel forged the name of Henry Miller on a check for $15 in order to purchase a motorcycle, he admits. He was once before convicted on a charge of stealing a motorcycle.

All Locked Together.

Three colored men spent Sunday night in the barren cellroom of the city jail. Two of the men were charged with larceny and the third was their accuser. William Newton, who rooms at 1326 Lafayette street, testified that Rufus John Johnson and George Henry took $5 from beneath his pillow Sunday evening. When he reported the theft at the station the other two men were sent for and the trio continued. The case was dismissed Monday.

Used a Beer Mug.

Fred Rodenbeck, saloonkeeper, will be tried Wednesday on a charge of assault on an Italian. It is alleged that the pair had an argument in Rodenbeck's place of business Saturday night and Rodenbeck struck the foreigner with a beer mug.

Other Police Court Cases.

George Martin, colored, drew a knife on a man who disagreed with his views when the couple were talking in the court house lobby. It is alleged. Martin was arrested by Detective Sergeant Spillner on a disorderly charge. He will be tried Tuesday.

Charles Fohmuth, 56, charged with mistreating children, was fined $15 and costs. No criminal charge could be proven against the man, although two boys told of undue attentions.

Cases of public intoxication were: John Mayfield, fined $25 and costs; Robert Elder, $5; Theodore Dregmeyer, $5; Carl Shultz, $1; Charles Hestis, $1. Harry Fernwell, Joe Osheski, John Curran and Clarence Warren were released. Guy Hellinger will be tried on Tuesday.

Olaf Olson, who was brought back from Logansport and who is charged with neglecting his children, will be tried on Saturday.

PRESENCE OF MIND SAVES BOY'S LIFE

Little James Foohey, 6, son of Timothy Foohey, Harrison street and Douglas avenue, had the presence of mind to draw his feet and arms up close to his body when he was knocked down by the fender of a ponderous auto truck Saturday. The big rear wheels of the machine, loaded with 5,000 pounds of ice, grazed the boy's body. If his legs or hands had come in the path of the crushing wheels they would have been cut in two.

The lad was carried to his home after the accident. His shoulder is cut and bruised and back bruised. He was able to be about the home Monday. The physician in charge does not consider the injuries serious.
